Letter 'snub' fuels fresh fury in saga over airport proposals

By Chris Britcher

chris.britcher@archant.co.uk

TRANSPORT Secretary Justine Greening insists she will reply "imminently" to a cross-party council letter calling for an urgent meeting over the controversial plans for a multi-billion pound airport in the Thames Estuary.

But her vow to respond came only after a week of mounting pressure and increasing resentment from the opposition and then a direct approach to her office from council chiefs.

It is the latest snub delivered to Medway Council over the proposals for a £50 billion international hub on Grain – or the so-called Boris Island in the estuary, planned for reclaimed land and championed by London Mayor Boris Johnson.

Repeated attempts by the council's top brass to meet with Mr Johnson to discuss his proposals, which would have such an impact on the local area have, much to their frustration, so far come to nothing.

The letter at the centre of the new row was signed by the leader of all the parties represented within Medway Council and sent to the Transport Secretary expressing their united opposition to the proposals and a desire to discuss the key issues face-to-face.

Sent on January 18, it followed confirmation from the Government that a consultation into the plans would take place – fuelling concerns the Coalition was about to go from ice cold to red hot on the plans which would increase capacity and ease pressure on Heathrow.

Cllr Paul Godwin, leader of the Labour group, and one of the signatories of the letter, said: "Given the significance of this issue for Medway it is shameful that Justine Greening MP has not bothered to acknowledge our cross-party letter for representation."

It staged a renewed campaign at the weekend calling for more transparency with the public.

A Medway Council spokesman told YourMedway on Wednesday: "We are aware that a number of groups at the council are anxious to hear the response to their request for an urgent meeting between each council group leader and the Secretary of State. With that in mind, we contacted her office yesterday and were assured by her staff that a reply will be with us shortly."

The letter was signed by Conservative, and council, leader Rodney Chambers, Labour's Paul Godwin, Liberal Democrat Sheila Kearney and Independent group leader Andy Stamp.

It described the proposal as "a pipe dream".

It added: "If it were to go ahead it would have a huge affect on the lives of hundreds of thousands of residents in Medway, as well as across Kent and the wider Thames Estuary, and would devastate an area of global environmental significance providing a home for around 250,000 migrating wildfowl annually.

"An airport would cost up to £70billion, would require huge highways and infrastructure and cut great swathes off the green belt and countryside.

"We strongly urge you to keep to government policy and continue looking at fully utilising the capacity of existing airports – such as the five London already has (which is two more than New York) and others such as Manston and Birmingham – which could both be joined to London by high speed rail."

CRIME

Property tycoon makes bid for crime commissioner job

By Ed Hill

ed.hill@archant.co.uk

A MAN who made a multi-million pound fortune on the property market says he has the financial skills to help run Kent Police.

Fergus Wilson, 63, and his wife Judith made their name building a large portfolio on the buy-to-let market.

The former maths teacher from Maidstone now wants to be elected as the police commissioner for the county.

He said: "I was concerned about the amount of petty crime affecting our properties that was not cleared up. It may have been low level crime but the police just don't have the resources."

Mr Wilson and his wife own hundreds of properties, mainly in Ashford and Maidstone.

He said in difficult economic times the main aim of the police commissioner should be to create a cost effective police force, adding: "Basically we are in a position where we have to run a police service when we really don't have enough money to do it."

"Anyone else elected would have exactly the same problem. We have to start making decisions that are more important than just how quickly police answer the phone."

MONEY SKILLS:

Fergus Wilson and his wife Judith made their millions in property

Mr Wilson, who also owns a number of racehorses, said he would have a no-nonsense approach to policing.

"I will ask the people of Kent what they want. If people want their money spent in a certain way that is what we should give them," he said.

The elections for the new commissioner take place on November 15. The role will replace the current Kent Police Authority made up of a panel of councillors and lay people.

Like the police authority, the commissioner will have the power to hire and fire the chief constable, manage budgets and set police priorities.

Mr Wilson was unconcerned about his own lack of experience in policing and admitted he had only just learnt that Ann Barnes was the current chair of the police authority.

Another hotly tipped candidate is Colonel Tim Collins, who made his name during the war in Iraq. He hopes to be the Tory candidate but angered police unions when he said the job only needed to be part time.

Mr Wilson said he had a number of ideas that would save money when it came to policing, such as using more special constables and cutting back on vehicle costs.

His other ideas for raising money may not be welcomed by Kent drivers. He gave an example of an officer who had been posted near his former home at his request to catch speeding drivers.

He said: "He got £900 worth of fines. They then said they did not have the resources to do it again. That does not seem very business-like to me. Speeding is a revenue earner."

Despite his own brushes with the law (two speeding fines and another for using a mobile phone while driving) the property tycoon said he is pro-police and ready to tackle the challenges.

He said: "A lot of people like my straight talking. I am not someone who believes in a lot of chat. I don't just want to be a police commissioner in name only. If I am elected I will be straight round to the nearest police station."

Crackdown planned on off-road bikers roaring around popular field

By Chris Murphy

yourmedway@kosmedia.co.uk

OFF-road motorcyclists who roar around a field in Gillingham, blighting the lives of those living nearby, could soon be a thing of the past.

A councillor has vowed to clampdown on the riders who tear around the Queen Elizabeth II Field. And he says he'll bring in steel barriers if necessary.

Currently, as soon as devices designed to restrict access to the field are installed, the bikers tear them up and plague locals with the noise of their engines.

Now Labour councillor for Gillingham North, Adam Price, is appealing for local support in his stand against the off-rovers.

He said: "New bike restrictors have twice been pulled up from the Gillingham cinder path, but Medway Council is determined not to give in. These restrictors will continue to be replaced. I appeal to local residents to report any vandalism they may witness.

"Residents on The Vineries estate and in the surrounding area have had to put up with the noise from off-road bikers for far too long. I am always receiving complaints from residents about this issue."

The cinder path is a popular pedestrian route for residents on their way to and from their homes, local schools, Gillingham station and the High Street.

It runs from Woodlands Road to the Gillingham level crossing in Ingram Road via Maple Avenue, between the field, The Vineries estate and the railway line.

The fields used to be the former Gillingham rubbish tip making it a popular destination for off-road motor bikers who often roar up the cinder path on their way to the fields with little regard for pedestrians and local residents, said the councillor.

In January, Cllr Price said he authorised £1,000 from his ward improvement funds to install new bike restrictors at Woodlands Road and Maple Avenue to supplement others previously installed by Moat Housing Association near The Vineries estate.

The councillor added: "The restrictors are designed to discourage motorcyclists whilst still allowing pedestrians including mothers with buggies to access the path."

But the restrictors are under almost constant attack and are vandalised.

He said with the help of residents, those responsible could be caught and punished for the attacks.

He said: "A few years ago local young people from The Vineries appealed for government funding to further cap the field to enable residents to safely enjoy the much-needed local green space.

"They received ongoing support from the Reverend Bill Clark at the Activity Loft, Anne Atkinson of Moat Housing Association and former MP Paul Clark, as well as visits from the likes of John Prescott and Caroline Flint."

Bookies put us second favourite in city race

HOPES of securing city status have been given an unexpected shot in the arm after bookmakers William Hill installed Medway as second favourites to emerge triumphant.

It comes just weeks after a poll of the 26 towns hoping for the upgrade saw Medway rated one of the least popular choices.

However, William Hill has put Medway at 6/1 to become a city - behind only hot favourite Reading at 10/11.

As part of the Diamond Jubilee celebrations, the Queen will create another city within the coming weeks.

In the recent YouGov popularity poll, Bournemouth emerged as a frontrunner. But not according to the bookies, which pegs it back at 14-1.

William Hill spokesman Joe Crilly said: "Since we opened the betting on the Diamond Jubilee City Status over six months ago, we have seen pretty much one way traffic for Reading - which has been backed in from 4/1 to 10/11. Saying this however, the outsiders have been known to finish strongly in races like this and so all is not necessarily lost for the other runners."

With Reading out in front and Medway close behind, the long shots are Tower Hamlets at 25-1, St Austell at 33-1 and Goole at 50-1.

EMPLOYMENT

College's key role in fight to find work for Thamesteel apprentices

By Marijke Cox

THE task force set up to help workers left unemployed by the demise of Thamesteel on Sheppey has pledged to invest £110,000 to secure jobs for the HNC students affected.

As part of its 400-strong workforce, the stricken Sheerness steelworks employed nine apprentices and eight workers who had completed their apprenticeships and were completing their Higher National Certificate (HNC) through the company with MidKent College at its Medway campus.

But with the demise of Thamesteel, the future looked bleak for the trainees.

Through the work of the task force, however, which is being led by Kent County Council and involves MidKent College, four of the nine apprentices have now been taken on by firms in Kent, including Peel Ports and IE Solutions Ltd, and the remaining five are due for meetings with employers who are looking to give them a job.

And on Wednesday, hopes were raised for the HNC students, when KCC said it would give £10,000 to employers who took one of them on.

Three former HNC students, who had left the course after Thamesteel went into administration last month, have returned, potentially increasing the total amount available to £110,000.

MidKent College's business development manager Jacqui Brown, who is based at the Medway campus, said she was over the moon.

"This is really positive news and not only that, the apprentices have been taken on by employers," she said.

"Kevin Lynes from KCC came to the college to confirm the funding and it was made official. With the eight HNC students it means KCC is committed to £80,000.

"However, three of the HNC students who were despondent after the news of Thamesteel and didn't want to continue have come back, pushing the number up to 11. This means instead of £80,000, KCC will be committed to £110,000."

She added: "We'll be going out over the next few days to see whether we can encourage employers to take these individuals on.

"We still need to see how to provide the grants, but that can all be worked out. I'm just over the moon – this is really positive news after what's happened at Thamesteel."

The task force, set up two weeks ago to find a way forward after the closure of the steel firm, is currently calling on businesses to take on workers left unemployed.

Around 350 of the 400 staff have been made redundant. The remaining 50 are being kept on while administrators look to sell on the plant.

So far some 20 expressions of interest have been received, spawning hopes some jobs could be salvaged.

Thamesteel was one of Sheppey's biggest employers and has been on the site in various guises since the early 1970s.

The task force met for a second time this week to discuss potential ways forward.

THE University of Greenwich is holding an open day for those considering adult nursing, at Medway Maritime Hospital this Saturday.

Experienced hospital and university staff will be available to answer questions between 10am and 2pm at the hospital's Postgraduate Centre in Windmill Road, Gillingham. It is currently recruiting for its adult nursing programme at the Medway campus from January 2013.

SOCIAL CARE

Controversial care homes debate looks set to rumble on

THE debate over controversial plans for three adult care homes is set to be reignited after the decision was called-in by Labour councillors.

At a council meeting last week, it was agreed to sell off Nelson Court in Chatham and outsource Robert Bean Lodge in Rochester and Platters Farm Lodge in Rainham.

But the Labour group, which has been fighting the proposals, have called the decision in, with a meeting planned for Thursday.

A meeting of the council's scrutiny committee will consider the grounds on which the decision has been questioned and will decide a course of action.

The proposals form part of an overhaul of adult social care services in Medway.

Those behind the plans insist the moves are not about cost-cutting, but adapting the services to the benefits of the user.

But Teresa Murray, Medway Labour's spokesperson for adult health and social care said: "A large number of the service users have severe learning difficulties or are elderly residents who need very specific care. It is the least we can ask that we treat them with respect and properly listen to their concerns.

"What struck the Labour group were the testimonies of service users who have had a poor experience in the private sector during the course of the consultation, who are now expressing concerns that quality of care goes down if these homes are outsourced.

"This makes clear the importance of having council run services as not only a source of assured quality, but also a safety net for those who have been failed by the private market."

Council chiefs insist they have consulted and listened to the views of residents and say discussions with residents, families, carers and staff at the three homes will take place over the coming months.

As reported last week, a decision on the future of the Balfour Centre in Rochester has been delayed while officers give consideration to a new proposal from Medway Community Healthcare.

MEDIA

Women must report on conflict, says Sky star

By Chris Murphy

yourmedway@kosmedia.co.uk

AS news emerged that Sunday Times reporter Marie Colvin had been killed in the civil war-torn town of Homs in Syria, a top international TV correspondent had already called for all war reporters to be treated equally, no matter if they are male or female.

That was the message from Sky News special correspondent Alex Crawford when she spoke at the University of Kent in Chatham, just hours before it was revealed Ms Colvin had been killed along with a French photographer. The house they were in was hit by a shell.

Before she knew of the tragedy, Ms Crawford made an impassioned plea for female journalists to continue to be treated equally as war reporters during her delivery of the annual Bob Friend Memorial lecture.

Entitled Alex Crawford: A Reporter's Story, the three-times winner of the coveted Royal Television Society television journalist of the year award said there are more female journalists than ever as foreign correspondents, so equality was long overdue.

Speaking about incidents in Egypt and other Arab Spring locations when female journalists had been targeted and assaulted, the reporter said any suggestion that women should not be sent to war zones was wrong.

Female journalists "have a duty" to broadcast from the front line, she said.

She told the audience: "This has been a dangerous series of revolutions to cover – whether you are a man or a woman. It can't get more hostile than what many of us have had to cover over the past year. It is still tough – and women reporters face a lot of danger on the frontline.

"In Egypt several female reporters were sexually assaulted within days of each other, trying to cover the elections. One – Mona Eltahawy – had both her arms broken during a beating by Egyptian security forces. These assaults followed the sexual attack on Lara Logan, from CBS, earlier last year.

IN THE NEWS: From left: Prof Tim Luckhurst, Sky journalist Alex Crawford, Sky's Rob Kirk and scholarship winner Jemma Collins

"High profile journalists – all of them female. The attacks led to Reporters Sans Frontieres suggesting that all media outlets should stop sending women to Egypt.

"Have we stepped back to the 1950s? Are we really suggesting the news organisations should not send women into difficult and dangerous places now after years and years of trying to convince editors to give us a chance?

"Egypt was and is a dangerous place for reporters whether you are male or female. But in Egypt alone over the week that Mona and Caroline Sinz were attacked, at least 27 journalists were beaten, detained or harassed – all but four were male.

"We female reporters get better access to female protestors, to female medics and wards, to those who are abused sexually, because many women will talk only to other women.

"It is necessary for us to be there, to see what is going on, to witness what is happening and to report live from there.

Picture: IMAGWORKS

"We all feel we have a job to do and an important contribution to make. Women are in the ascendancy in war reporting all over the world. And we shouldn't even be discussing whether or why. It is important and utterly right."

Introducing Alex Crawford, Professor Tim Luckhurst, head of the university's centre for journalism, said she was the latest in a line of illustrious female reporters, going back to the US journalist Martha Gellhorn who covered all the major conflicts and was renowned as one of the finest correspondents of the 20th century, acting as an inspiration to women entering journalism.

The event, at Kent's Medway campus also saw Rob Kirk, editorial development manager for Sky News, present first-year student Jemma Collins with the 2012 Sky Bob Friend Memorial Scholarship.

The lecture and scholarship were established in 2009 in memory of Bob Friend, the original face of Sky News and a long-serving BBC journalist.

Congratulations Miss Collins,

Mr Kirk said: "We're delighted that this partnership between Sky News and the University of Kent creates a wonderful opportunity for a young journalist at the start of their career. As a man of Kent, Bob would have approved."

Bob Friend joined Sky News at its launch 22 years ago and quickly became the face of the new channel. In his 14 years with Sky News he won a glowing international reputation for his warmth, intelligence and humour, winning a number of awards.

He died in October 2008 and is survived by his wife Marion and their two daughters. The lecture and scholarship were established by the Friend family, Sky News and the University of Kent.

The scholarship is awarded to a student who has demonstrated outstanding academic and professional merit and shows great potential for a future career in journalism. Jemma Collins will have her first year tuition fees paid and is guaranteed a four-week placement at Sky News.

CRIME

Community service for benefits cheat accused of lying to court

By Chris Britcher

chris.britcher@archant.co.uk

A BENEFIT cheat who swindled the taxpayer out of more than £12,000 has been ordered to carry out community service after a judge told her "I do believe you have lied to me today" at a hearing this week.

Cleaner Radmilla Mirosova, 35, failed to declare her partner had returned to live with her while claiming housing and council tax benefit as a single parent on a low wage.

Mirosova, of Lodge Hill Lane, Chattenden, was in a relationship with Petr Hajek, a cleaning supervisor for City Facilities Management Limited.

She pleaded not guilty to a charge of failing to notify a change in her circumstances, which had resulted in an overpayment of £10,351.92 housing benefit tax and £1,760.08 in council tax benefit.

During the trial at Medway Magistrates Court on Monday, Mirosova said she did not know where Mr Hajek lived, once he had returned to the country.

But the court was told that from September 29, 2008, he was contributing substantially to her household while working for the same employer as Mirosova. She could also not explain why she received post for him at her address.

The court heard the two had a joint bank ac-

GUILTY:
Radmilla Mirosova claimed thousands of pounds in benefits she was not entitled to count – which they both applied for while Mirosova claimed benefits she was not entitled to. But Mirosova said they did not share the funds in this account and claimed she would repay Mr Hajek any money she used from it.

However, District Judge Michael Kelly stated this was 'not credible'.

Ordering Mirosova to complete a 60-hour community punishment order within 12 months and pay £300 legal costs, he told the defendant: "The joint account makes it clear that you were sharing a life, finances and a household together and it is clear you were a couple."

"I believe you are of previous good character and will not re-offend. Nor do I believe you would generally tell lies, but I do believe you have lied to me today."

Following the hearing, Alan Jarrett, Medway Council's deputy leader and portfolio holder for finance, said the case showed that claiming benefits when people are not entitled to them will not be tolerated.

He added: "It is illegal to claim benefits you are not entitled to and we will always take action against people who do this."

"This person claimed more than £12,000 of public money, refused to admit her crime and told the court a story that even the judge said was not credible. I fully support the court in the action they have taken."

NEWS IN BRIEF

➔ Car 'engulfed' by fire

FIREFIGHTERS were called to put out a blaze in a car on the approach road to the Medway Tunnel on Tuesday night.

The driver of a Ford Focus was able to get out of the vehicle after the fire started and move to safety – and fire crews were quickly able to bring it under control.

Those attending the fire said the car was completely engulfed. It is not known how the fire started.

➔ Quiz Southeastern

COMMUTERS will get the chance to quiz train operator bosses this week.

Senior Southeastern managers will be available at St Pancras station on Thursday, March 1 between 8am and 10am to answer questions from travellers about their service.

Those wishing to take part should make their way to the Southeastern stand located on the main platform concourse at the destination for the area's high-speed trains.

➔ Fire station open day

STROOD Fire Station is opening its doors to the public on Saturday in a bid to warn motorists about the consequences of poor driving.

A number of demonstrations will be held at the site in Gravesend Road including a car cutting exercise which will show drivers the alarming aftermath of a crash. Other safety agencies will also be taking part in the event, including ambulance crews.

HOUSING

Wartime scheme blossoms in 21st century

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

A UNIQUE charity providing homeless people with a place to live and the tools to rebuild their lives is due to open in Rochester.

Emmaus, which originated in France, has 22 'communities' in the UK – and just one in Kent – but the organisation is preparing to launch in Medway to reach out to more people in need.

The charity was launched 63 years ago by politician and member of the French Resistance Abbé Pierre to fight homelessness and poverty for the victims of World War Two.

It was unlike other aid movements of the time and provided homeless people not just with food and shelter, but with the purpose of helping others.

A team of 18 homeless men, called 'companions', worked alongside Abbé Pierre to help build temporary homes for mothers and children who had lost everything in the war.

The companions refused to take donations and instead became 'rag-pickers' – collecting things that people no longer wanted and selling them on to raise money to fund house building and help those with a greater need. And so the concept of Emmaus was born.

In 1990, the charity arrived in Britain having already spread across the globe, helping homeless people rebuild their lives and give something back to society.

Emmaus set up 22 'communities' in the UK, with one in Dover – St Martin's Emmaus.

And now another is due to launch in Rochester, offering a lifeline to homeless people.

In Dover, the charity is located in a 14th century military fort on the iconic White Cliffs and houses and feeds 21 people who work 40-hour weeks restoring donated furniture and other goods which are sold in shops both on site and in Canterbury.

Marketing manager David Robinson, who arrived at St Martin's Emmaus as a companion three years ago, said as soon as a homeless person arrives they must come off benefits and start work.

The community is also an alcohol and drug-free zone.

Mr Robinson said: "The companions have a place to live, they are fed and most importantly they are safe.

"A lot of the time they find us. They come and go, they can stay here as long as they want; we have two people who have been here for 11 years.

"They come from different backgrounds and have different skills. Homelessness can happen to anyone. Previous to this, I was a general manager for a big German company.

"I got divorced, started drinking and ended up in the Promis Recovery Centre."

But the centre, which treated high-profile clients, was destroyed in a fire in 2009.

"I ended up sleeping under a tree," said Mr Robinson. "I came to Emmaus and now I deal with the marketing. Everyone who comes here works."

Companions are paid weekly, with the charity keeping £5 every week in savings for each person so they have money when they leave. Emmaus even arranges courses like NVQs where possible, too.

The charity relies solely on donations and receives no funding from the Government.

Folk guitarist in shock at being named BBC musician of the year

By Chris Murphy
editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

TALENTED musician Tim Edey has been recognised for his amazing work by taking folk music's top award.

Composer Tim was born in Broadstairs, and is famed for his mastery of several instruments. He has now been named Musician of the Year at the BBC Radio 2 Folk Awards held at Salford's Media Village.

At the pinnacle of his 15-year career, he said: "I was absolutely honoured and delighted to have been asked to perform and attend. I was utterly shocked to receive the award for Musician of the Year, I'm still very much in shock."

"Also being awarded best duo with Brendan Power was fantastic. It was a real pleasure attending and meeting so many amazing stars of the world folk music scene past and present."

He made his first solo album aged just 17, with legendary Australian-Irish guitarist and producer Steve Cooney.

HIGH NOTE: Musician Tim Edey

player, Tim was taken to a Begley and Cooney concert by his father, and a week later started learning to play the guitar.

Tim said: "I was obsessed."

"Both Steve Cooney and Seamus Begley have taught me so much about playing music, and I am very grateful to them, along with so many others in the music scene who have had massive influence throughout my life so far."

The 32-year-old said: "Folk music is still a bit fringe in the world of music, but this award will help get our sound out there a little more."

"I lived for a little while in County Kerry, but I have now moved back to my first love, Kent. I have a home with my partner and PR manager Isobel Crowe in Faversham."

"I love playing in Kent – the audiences are so receptive and knowledgeable."

"Medway is a great place and we will be on stage at the Brook theatre soon, plus we are playing at Broadstairs Festival on August 13. There is also a gig at the Tom Thumb Theatre in Margate on March 2."

"Kent is a great place to play and live and we have toured everywhere in the UK, Ireland and Europe. We just love coming back here to relax."

Tim's work includes tracks like Little Bird written for Sharon Shannon, which features regularly on BBC radio shows.

His record company Gnatbite records said: "Tim is very much in demand by the cream of the folk music scene."

Be a sport ambassador and support Transplant Games this summer

By James Benjamin

yourmedway@kosmedia.co.uk

THE focus may be on the Olympic Games this summer, but there is a major sporting event taking place on our doorstep this year - and you have a chance to help it be a great success.

Medway is hosting the 35th British Transplant Games which will take place at Medway Park in Gillingham between August 23 and 26. It will be staged following the end of the London Games and the start of the Paralympics.

The British Transplant Games now regularly attracts over 600 competitors from across the UK and more than 1,000 people are set to flock to watch the events.

The Games were last held in Belfast, and it is seen as a coup for Medway to be hosting this year's event. They were officially launched in November at a special event at Rochester Cathedral.

Organised on behalf of Transplant Sport UK, the purpose of the Games is to encourage transplant patients to regain fitness, promote friendship and co-operation between those taking part and to increase public awareness of the value of organ donation.

And now Medway Council is calling on residents to help make it an event to remember.

A spokesman for the council said: "We are signing up Medway sports ambassadors to help with this and other local and national events being staged in Medway this year, including the Medway Mile, the National England Basketball Play-off Finals and The Medway Festival of Sport.

"More than 100 local volunteers helped deliver Medway's first global sporting event, the Modern Pentathlon World Cup in April 2010, and many returned for the 2011 Modern Pentathlon European Championships."

The 2012 Games will take place at Medway Park, with sporting events also taking place across Medway and north Kent. The event will aid selection of the Great Britain team for the World Transplant Games.

To find out more about being a sports ambassador or to register your interest email sportsdevteam@medway.gov.uk or call 01634 338764.

Need a laugh? The Time is Now as Chris dives into the thick of stand up

By Joe Bill

joe.bill@archant.co.uk

STAR of the widely acclaimed political comedy The Thick of It, Chris Addison will be bringing his stand-up show to Chatham next week – and confirmed to fans of the hit show that a new series starts filming soon.

After a sell-out tour in 2010, Mr Addison brings his The Time is Now show to the Central Theatre on Thursday.

It forms part of a critically acclaimed jaunt of venues around the UK and is building on his reputation as one of the nation's top comic talents.

He leapt to fame as Ollie Reeder in The Thick of It and has also appeared on Mock the Week and Have I Got News For you.

Speaking to YourMedway he said: "There is no real theme to the show but there is some political stuff, some personal stuff and the failings of myself and the rest of the world too."

"I used to do shows about big things but the last couple I have

FUNNY MAN:

Chris Addison is due to appear at the Central Theatre wanted to do straight stand up, which weirdly are harder to write. If you have a subject you can talk about it and score off some lines."

And he confirmed stars of BBC comedy The Thick of It are preparing to go back into filming for a third series. He said: "I don't just think there will be a new Thick of It series coming out, I am certain of it."

"In a month we start rehearsing the next episodes, so I imagine it will be out late this year."

"Thanks to Twitter I get asked about it three times a day. Every now and again I just announce that there will be more coming out but the questions don't stop."

The show takes place on March 1. Tickets cost £20.

CHARITY

Marathon run a noble way to celebrate 30th

A RUNNER from Rainham will celebrate his 30th birthday by pounding the streets of London in April hoping to raise more than £1,000 for a children's cancer charity.

Jamie Smith-Thompson will be part of the Children with Cancer UK charity team taking part in the Virgin London Marathon on April 22.

The financial advisor, whose birthday coincides with the big race, said: "Cancer affects many people in the UK, which is tragic, although what magnifies this charity is that they help specifically children with the illness – who could be more deserving of our time and money?"

Every year over 3,300 youngsters are diagnosed with cancer, the biggest child-killer disease in the UK.

Mr Smith-Thompson, who has spent months preparing for the race, is hoping to raise £1,200 by taking part. He and his fellow runners will be part of the Mr Men and Little Miss team – easily spotted by wearing Mr Happy and Mr Tickle running vests.

Ben Twyman, head of running events at the charity said: "Being told your child has cancer is the start of an uncertain and difficult time for families. Thanks to Jamie and the support from all of our dedicated marathon runners we are able to continue vital research into childhood cancer and help save young lives that would have otherwise been lost forever."

The charity funds life-saving research into the causes, prevention and treatment of childhood cancer, and works to protect young lives through essential welfare and campaigning.

Win family tickets to visit the Kent Game & Equine Festival

THE Kent Game & Equine Festival is among the first of the great regional game fairs in the calendar, and is set to return on March 24-25 at the Kent Showground, Detling, Maidstone.

This established event, regularly attended by more than 8,000 visitors, is a celebration of countryside life from fishing and shooting to traditional crafts and locally produced food; and with an exciting array of equestrian entertainment and education, the show offers visitors the ultimate countryside experience.

And we have 10 family tickets (two adults and two children) to give away, so you won't miss the fun.

The outdoor Supreme Equine Arena will feature international show jumping star Philip Spivey, western champion Shane Borland, Australian horseman-ship, a breed parade together with a fast-paced Pony Club horse and hound show jumping challenge.

The show also includes an on-site clay shoot, terrier and lurcher shows, fly-casting demonstrations and coaching, archery, falconry, racing ferrets, vintage tractors and machinery, and a game cookery theatre hosting chefs who will demonstrate how to prepare delicious meals from traditional game meats.

The Kent Game & Equine Festival also hosts an indoor countryside and equestrian shopping village with more than 100 retail outlets.

HERITAGE

Battle declared to save historic war memorials

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

KENT'S historic war memorials could receive special protection through a new campaign which looks to restore crumbling monuments as part of the forthcoming World War One centenary.

Moves to secure protection were sparked by the increasing number falling into disrepair, either by neglect or vandalism.

The campaign, launched by the Heritage Lottery Fund, has brought together heritage organisations to form a War Memorials Action Group to review how to protect and restore monuments in time for the centenary of the outbreak of World War One in 2014.

The group will meet twice a year and review money available from the Lottery and how it could be made easier for communities wanting to restore their local monument.

People in Kent are invited to get involved by applying for funding and highlighting memorials that need restoration in time for the centenary.

Over the years, many of the county's memorials have fallen victim to thieves or vandals, most recently in Sidcup where a pair of brass plaques honouring those who died in the two world wars were prised off by thieves and sold to scrap metal dealers.

Chatham's Naval Memorial has to be patrolled due to constant vandalism, and in Ashford the World War One memorial tank was defaced.

Heavy-handed cleaners in Margate damaged a memorial tablet last year by accidentally blasting off the lettering of the names of servicemen.

The Heritage Lottery Fund (HLF) is encouraging groups to come forward with ideas to celebrate the World War One centenary involving the restoration of memorials.

IN MEMORY: The tank at Ashford, and the Kennington Memorial during the refurbishment works

Head of the organisation for the South East Stuart McLeod said: "We would be interested to hear from community groups in Kent who have an idea for a project."

"We are actively seeking and welcoming applications for all kinds of heritage projects large and small that aim to mark the anniversaries of World War One."

A spokeswoman for the organisation said it has been contacting groups in the county to let them know about funding and support available.

"As part of this campaign, HLF has set up a War Memorials Action Group, which is made up of funders, heritage organisations and representatives of the local and voluntary sectors," she said.

"It will be meeting for the first time in March to review the issues facing the protection and restoration of war memorials and to identify what may be needed to ensure they are kept in good condition so that future generations are able to learn about them and the significance they hold within our communities."

Restoration work has recently been carried out in Kennington near Ashford on a memorial to 22 residents who lost their lives in World War Two. It will now include a shelter and new bench in the Garden of Remembrance in Ulley Road.

The original memorial had been neglected for many years and was at risk of collapse.

Chris Morley, chair of the Kennington Community Forum, said he was pleased with the restoration work.

It is hoped other projects such as this will be given the green light as a result of the campaign.

JOBS

New apprentice joins the world of work thanks to advice centre

By Chris Britcher

chris.britcher@archant.co.uk

IF there is an area which is seeing positive signs across Medway right now it is that of apprenticeships.

Seen as a key driver to help a swathe of youngsters more vocationally focused than academic, these have played a key role in the council's Employ Medway Advice Centre, helping its 600th jobseeker back into employment.

Nigel Wren, 23, from Strood, had been out of work for nearly four years, but after attending the advice centre in Chatham High Street in October, he has now been recruited as an apprentice bricklayer on the Rochester Riverside housing development, working for Owen Contractors.

The apprenticeship will last two years, during which he will be based on site, spending one day a week studying towards a diploma and NVQ in brick-laying at MidKent College, Maidstone.

Mr Wren said: "This has given me a real chance to get on in life."

The contractors will gain a £2,000 subsidy towards Mr Wren's training costs as part of the council's apprenticeship subsidy scheme, GAPs.

FRESH START: Cllr Jane Chitty, portfolio holder for strategic development and economic growth with apprentice Nigel Wren

Money for the £200,000 scheme, which launched last October and helps businesses with an apprentice's wage or training costs, is split equally between Medway Council and the Interreg 2 Seas programme which is part-funded by the European Regional Development Fund.

The council's apprenticeship schemes have also seen more than 250 apprenticeships created at local businesses over the past year, through both the subsidy scheme and the national 100 in 100 apprenticeship campaign, which created more than 190 trainee positions in all.

Employ Medway Advice Centre has been open since September 2009, and as well as helping jobseekers, has also provided more than 800 people with training on basic IT, interview and CV skills.

HEALTH

Asbestos pay-out hope in face of shock death rates

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

MEDWAY has Britain's second highest rate of asbestos-linked deaths, and the Government stands accused of dragging its feet to help victims while they are still alive.

But a High Court award of more than £50,000 to a former miner could pave the way to better settlements.

A company of compensation specialists used a freedom of information request to the UK's office of statistics, and the results make shocking reading.

Only Barrow has a higher death rate for its population with 8.4 dying per 100,000. While the national average is 2.5 deaths, Medway is almost three times that at 6.5.

Heavy industry and the docks helped contribute to the rise in cases of mesothelioma - a cancer caused by asbestos exposure.

Gravesham's death rate of 4.0 is 23rd, next are Maidstone, Tonbridge and Malling,

SUFFERING: Mesothelioma rates are soaring in Medway

Sevenoaks and Thanet with 3.7; Shepway had 3.2; Dartford, 3.0 and Swale, 2.8. Canterbury is 139th on 2.6; Tunbridge has 2.2; Ashford, 2.0; and Dover is 278th with 1.7.

The figures were obtained by not-for-profit campaign group the Association of Personal Injury Lawyers.

Its president David Bott said: "More people die of mesothelioma in Medway per head of the population than in most other parts of the country."

"What is needed is for the Government to bring forward proposals for a fund which would act as a safety net for injured workers who are otherwise unable to pursue justice."

At the moment, claims are hard to prove and win because the initial cause of the illness could have happened decades ago. A company may have gone out of business, leaving no way of tracking down insurers or documents.

Now, Kent solicitors Furley Page has secured a legal breakthrough by helping to win £50,000 for Dennis Ball, 92, for his suffering after developing mesothelioma. This could set a precedent.

The recommended payout in the Judicial Studies Board Guidelines is £35,000.

The now defunct British Coal argued because Nottinghamshire miner Mr Ball was so old with a short life expectancy, his damages should be reduced. Mrs Justice Swift rejected this.

A Department of Work and Pensions spokesman said: "The DWP is working to resolve these issues."

A TATTOO artist has been fined £500 plus costs after being found guilty of tattooing a 15-year-old girl. Don Carfoot of Don's Tattooing in Hereson Road, Ramsgate, pleaded not guilty, but was convicted under the Tattooing of Minors Act 1969 at Margate Magistrates Court. HEALTHSuper-size ambulance to carry obese patients

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

AS the population gets increasingly obese, Kent ambulance service has been forced to buy an outsized vehicle to cater for its ever-growing patients.

The South East Coast Ambulance Service NHS Foundation Trust said it is taking delivery of three so-called 'bariatric ambulances' and specialist equipment – one will be based at Paddock Wood, and the others in Sussex and Surrey.

The bill for taxpayers is £400,000 for all three.

Bariatrics is the branch of medicine that deals with the causes, prevention, and treatment of obesity.

The vehicles are designed to transport patients weighing up to 50 stone and are based on the current DMA Mercedes model, produced through Irish supplier, Wilker.

Certain modifications have been specially made in this new breed of emergency vehicle, the company said.

Based in Clara, County Offaly, the firm said it had a wider tail lift, central stretcher location, with 360 degree access, central attendant seat for airways management and the ability to store to the side when

BIG DEAL:

A bariatric ambulance, designed to carry patients weighing up to 50 stone, is to be based at Paddock Wood transporting patients in their own wheelchair, or the new C Max stair-climber chair.

SECAmb's head of fleet, Justin Wand, added: "The new vehicles and equipment will provide the Trust with a specialist ability to care for these patients who have specific needs."

The design of the vehicle was finalised with contributions from health and safety and the bariatric working group.

Specialist manual handling aids and equipment include a Megasus stretcher, gantry and mobile hoists, threshold ramps and enhanced air cushion lifting equipment in addition to the stair-climber chair.

The Kent vehicle will be based at what is known as a 'make ready centre' and will be used for slimmer patients, too.

SECAmb operations director James Pavay said: "These vehicles can be used for any patient, from the outside you wouldn't notice them to look much different from the average ambulance."

He said moving a large patient is not usually a dignified procedure and the bariatric ambulances will make things easier.

Mr Pavay added: "We will probably need to increase the size of the fleet to meet the demand, but this is the first step."

PEDAL POWER: Stephen and Shirley Channing's book offers a variety of routes for hikers and cyclists

Journey around Kent – with a Victorian cyclist

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

A NEW work of travel literature called A Victorian Cyclist offers a rare and insightful look into the Kentish countryside in 1886, from the perspective of two wheels.

The third book from Thanet-based historian Stephen Channing and his wife Shirley, A Victorian Cyclist includes several different rambles, each beginning in the seaside town of Margate.

The continuing fascination for the Victorian era and its view of Britain has become even more apparent in recent years with TV series such as Michael Portillo's travelling on the railways using his 19th century Bradshaw's Guide to the landscape, town and villages.

There are also a great number of smaller roads across Kent which wind through countryside largely unchanged from the landscape of the time.

The book takes the reader through nearly 500 miles of Kent countryside, and explores a variety of routes that are ideal for the hiker and cyclist alike.

"From the saddle there is so much to see," said Shirley.

"Kent is a fantastic place and although I've lived here all my life, while researching the book and travelling the routes I went to places I'd never been before."

"As well as the beautiful landscapes there is the history and the people we encountered."

Providing detailed historical insight, the narrative offers a comprehensive account of the experiences and discoveries of a Victorian cyclist. This allows the reader to learn more about the landscape and ecology of the Victorian age, and discover how routes and paths have changed and developed over the years.

Past heroes, characters, and famous residents from the secluded villages and hamlets of the time are brought to life throughout the multiple journeys.

Additional extracts are drawn from contemporary media, putting the Victorian cyclist's exploits in context and drawing on changing attitudes to give a flavour of the age.

Conventional attitudes to women's position in society, the state of the roads and bike design are all covered, including a section on 'The Art of Velocipede Management'.

More than 200 photos and illustrations (most of which are around a 100-years-old) complete the reader's experience.

Stephen said: "When I discovered the first article written by the Victorian cyclist I was struck by the diverse content and attention to detail."

"After further research, I was astounded to find page after page of rambles covering the Kentish countryside, each as comprehensive as the first."

"I know readers will enjoy reading about the experiences, people, scenery, villages, buildings, flora and fauna which were so enjoyed by our cyclist in 1886. I wanted to offer historians, genealogists, ecologists et al, the opportunity to discover Kent as it was in Victorian days, from the pen of an articulate and knowledgeable member of society."

A Victorian Cyclist comes complete with sections from a contemporary copy of an Ordnance Survey Map for Canterbury and east Kent, showing the road system as it was in our cyclist's time.

Modern directions are provided, alongside illustrations and details about some of the history en route to allow the reader to rediscover these tracks through the eyes of both the modern and the Victorian explorer.

The publisher says the book is one which will interest historians, naturalists and geographers as well as those with a passion for cycling.

An associated website www.victoriantcyclist.com is also now up and running.

The book is available from Ozaru Books online and from retailers, including WH Smith and Waterstones.

OPINION

It's criminal to cut Legal Aid

Legal Aid and advice are vital services for those in need, says Andy Ball, of Advice Partnership for East Kent, ahead of cuts to the service

MOST of us think the fire service should be funded, even though our houses are not currently on fire.

Likewise the current NHS reforms are debated by people who are well, but think they might be sick in the future.

But there is another 'emergency service' that is also under threat: advice, much of it provided by the voluntary sector.

The Government's Legal Aid, Sentencing and Punishment of Offenders Bill is currently going through Parliament, and it will drastically reduce the specialist advice available in Kent.

As the Government cuts spending, Legal Aid, specialist legal advice and representation, has come under scrutiny.

It costs a lot – £2 billion a year. But most of that doesn't go to 'fat cat lawyers', despite what some people will tell you.

The average Legal Aid lawyer's salary is £25,000. And the £350 million the Government wants to cut from Legal Aid will disproportionately affect the most vulnerable; the Ministry of Justice says so.

Legal Aid comes in two parts.

Criminal Legal Aid provides the solicitors who attend police stations and the barristers who represent people charged with crime.

And it's here where eye-watering amounts of money come into play; 10 top lawyers received more than £500,000 each from Legal Aid in 2010, and some cases cost millions.

But even though criminal cases make up 55 per cent of the Legal Aid budget, they will only suffer 20 per cent of Government cuts.

Contrast this with Civil Legal Aid; advice and representation that deals with more everyday matters such as housing, debt, welfare benefits and family matters.

Apart from family law, much of this is provided by charities: Citizens Advice Bureaux, Shelter, and independent advice agencies. Why? Because it's not profitable for the private sector.

Charities struggle to break even on their Legal Aid work, despite many of the caseworkers being paid less than the average UK salary. More church mouse than fat cat.

But it is this part of Legal Aid that is taking the big hit.

Civil Legal Aid makes up 45 per cent of the Legal Aid budget, but will suffer 80 per cent of the cuts.

And according to recent research, at least 58 per cent of those savings will be lost due to increased costs for other Government departments.

Whole areas of advice will be lost. Welfare benefits, employment, much advice about debt and housing – all will lose Legal Aid funding. An estimated 6,500 specialist legal cases will be axed in Kent.

Legal Aid is a means to an end, and good quality advice needs funding

These are problems that many of us will face in life, often when we least expect it, and caused by things like redundancy, divorce, or illness.

Who will pick up the pieces? The voluntary sector will suffer from the Legal Aid cuts, and is already facing real-term cuts in council funding.

We're all subject to the law, and sometimes we have to deal with legal issues when we're least able to cope.

It's vital we have access to quality advice, and it's often more efficient for the taxpayer. Research from Citizens Advice says that £1 spent on the right advice at the right time can save £8 of Government spending.

Legal Aid is just a means to an end. By all means, reform it or replace it. But good quality advice needs proper funding. If you agree, tell your MP.

KOS COMMENT

Children not cost must be made the priority

LOOKED-after children being dumped in Kent by other councils is an ongoing problem.

But despite pressure by KCC, nothing seems to be done. While there are some cases where children need to be away from their home town, it's doubtful that all 1,340 youngsters in KCC's care had to be moved here.

And it's important to remember the impact this can have on a vulnerable child – taken away from friends, family and familiarity. But it's just as vital to think of the vulnerable children from Kent who could miss out on support due to the increasing strain on services.

Kent may be a quick and cheap option for other councils, but it's the children who could suffer.

Best of British grub

IT'S great to hear a Kent chippy has stolen the nation's heart to best voted the UK's best. And with some of the loveliest beaches on the British coastline in Kent, it's only right we have a fish and chip shop to match. Nothing beats a cod and chips by the sea and now you won't have to go too far to get the best there is.

Lay blame at Carroll's door

THE review of Peter Carroll's book about Gurkhas (February 19) gives an insight into his and Joanna Lumley's campaign to secure rights for Nepalese soldiers, but fails to reveal the real reason why he found it politically expedient to do so.

In 2000, he became the Lib Dem candidate for the Conservative-held Folkestone and Hythe constituency and in typical opportunistic-style decided to take up Nepalese soldiers' resentment that they did not have the same rights of residence and less pension rights than the rest of the British Army, as a means of shaming MP Michael Howard who had hitherto supported the traditional line that Nepalese soldiers must be resettled as Nepali citizens.

In 2004, Labour granted residency rights to the families of all Gurkhas who had served since 1997, but not those with earlier service.

In 2009, by persuading the Government to allow all retired Gurkhas to settle here, the pair's success turned out to be short-lived by virtue of its unintended consequence.

Last month, the Coalition announced that one in eight Gurkhas were to be made redundant. Former defence chief Lord Bramall had warned the Gurkha campaign "could kill the golden goose for later generations" and General Sir Mike Jackson declared the outcome "was the direct result of the campaign spearheaded by Joanna Lumley".

With Mr Carroll busy promoting his book, I will not hold my breath in anticipation of him or Ms Lumley offering an apology anytime soon.

John Stockham, Folkestone

MPs must act over drought

EMPTY rivers and the prospect of drought and standpipes can all be avoided if our representatives can influence decision-makers to sponsor a national water grid – distributing abundant water in the north, to us here in the south where it is desperately needed.

It could be done utilising much of our existing canal system, to the benefit of all, including fish and wildlife.

Politicians at all levels should recognise the dangers of drought this summer and represent households and farmers by making sure effective plans are in place, with the bonus that a water grid would produce many shovel-ready jobs and protect the Garden of England.

Edward La Coste, Lamberhurst

Send it down from on high

IT WAS interesting to read the headline "Praying for rain as water companies say 'prepare for drought'" on the cover of last week's edition because we were doing exactly that at our midweek church meeting in Gillingham.

We asked God to bring the rain because He is able to change the weather. The Bible says in Deuteronomy Chapter 11, verses 13-17 if we turn to God, He will send the rain in its right season (the water companies have already mentioned the need for the right season).

I would therefore suggest next Sunday we all go to Church and earnestly pray to God that He sends the rain.

Steve Noyce, Gillingham

Jump aboard London trains

I WAS surprised to discover that Dartford's Tory MP Gareth Johnson is so bitterly opposed to plans to include Dartford in some way within London's transport network (February 17).

He should think again...

Moves in this direction, of course, aren't new. Before 2010's general election, Dartford's former Labour MP Howard Stoate led a popular campaign to have Transport for London's (TfL) Oyster card scheme extended to Dartford.

And there are big advantages. Being able to swipe an Oyster card at Dartford station – something Dartfordians using nearby Crayford station can already do – will help tackle ticket queues.

Moreover, if Dartford's involvement was negotiated cleverly it could even cut fares – good news, potentially, for hard-pressed commuters.

True, this latest proposal looks bigger in scope than Dr Stoate's scheme and accountability is a factor.

TfL answers to London's mayor and Darfordians have no vote in mayoral elections. But negotiating a structure that represents local residents over the fairly narrow matter of train services to and from London shouldn't be impossible.

Mr Johnson's chief concern – that a move by TfL into Dartford will somehow undermine the town's Kentish character – sounds odd.

Does he really believe that Dartford's deeply entrenched Kentish heritage hinges on nothing more substantial than the technicalities of train service management?

Ultimately, this issue must be decided on more rational grounds. And, if there's a proposal that reduces queues, boosts efficiency and even cuts fares – whilst tackling accountability concerns – then it deserves serious consideration.

John Adams, councillor for Stone and former Labour parliamentary candidate for Dartford

Councils are not the ticket

WHAT short-sighted thinking of councils to raise parking fees.

Our high streets are already being starved of trade, mainly because people can park for free in most retail parks.

I remember when you could park in Northdown Road, Margate, for free and for as long as you liked. Parking restrictions were brought in and that was the start of its decline.

Increasing parking fees is no way to attract trade to our rundown towns. Please councils, think again before you add injury to injury.

Rex C Priggen, Westgate-on-Sea

NO SURPRISES from Roy Duff.

If it's getting colder, it's global warming; if it's getting warmer, it's global warming.

These guys can only handle a win-win, situation (Letters February 19).

No response to the reported weather cycles over hundreds of years. No response to any of the tangible, proveable and indisputable evidence from the past. Just more dodgy data that might suggest whatever these self-appointed 'experts' want it to suggest.

Even if global warming was a future issue, shortages of food, water and other resources, will arrive a lot sooner and be a lot more serious.

Why do these dogmatists turn a blind eye to the truth?

Your business is our business

This week we feature two businesses that are unique in their own way thanks to original thinking and an entrepreneurial spirit. Both based in Kent, they stretch their operations to two very different parts of the globe. Catch restaurants in Canterbury and Ashford use their own boat to gather fish in Norwegian waters, where tight regulations protect the environment. And fashion company CHK, based in Ashford, offers jobs, hope and self-respect to Bolivian women who might otherwise be living in poverty. In hard times it can be forgotten that business not only benefits the economy by generating cash – it can also help disadvantaged people and the natural world.

The fishy idea that might catch on

TWO fish-and-chips restaurants in Kent have a very special method of getting their main dishes – their cod and haddock are caught by their own boat.

Granite IV operates out of the Norwegian port of Ålesund and fishes the northern reaches of the North Sea, which rounds the North Cape of the country, and the Barents Sea, which laps the shores of Russia.

'Caught and cooked by us' is the slogan of the firm that runs the Catch restaurants in Ashford and Canterbury.

"I don't know anyone else who operates this way," said Graham Hollinshead, who founded the business. "When I set out, quality was my aim, so, rather than going to a third party for funding and backing, I went to the people who really know what fishing is about – those who do the work."

His company reached agreement with the operators of the 67-metre-long trawler and its captain, Ola Inge Gron-nevet, who recently visited Canterbury and lunched on the fish he had caught.

The Norwegian fishing fleet is subject to rigorous regulations designed to protect stocks, with boats boarded for inspections and helicopters used for surveillance. Nets are checked frequently and quotas sent via satellite link to the authorities.

The measures have seen stocks rise to a level not seen since the 1940s as Norway's Fiske Forever (Fish Forever) campaign seeks to preserve one of the country's most important industries.

The ship spends about four weeks at sea on any one trip and can operate in gale-force winds and 40ft sea swells. The fish are gutted and their heads removed before they are filleted and frozen at a temperature of -30°C.

The catch is then shipped to England, defrosted and served amid colourful surroundings, with posters, newspapers and even a shark as decorations.

Hollinshead said: "We want to make our customers smile, so you will find a little humour here and there in our restaurants. We take our food and what we do seriously, but we try not to take ourselves too seriously."

"Ultimately, nothing beats seeing happy customers once they have tasted and enjoyed our food."

"Our fish is top-quality, as you'd expect from a company with its own boats fishing clear Arctic waters. Fish for the shops is caught and delivered every few days to guarantee freshness."

"It has full Marine Stewardship Council approval, which means our stocks are well managed and sustainable."

"These are two of our most important priorities. We don't grow our own potatoes yet – they're from good farms in the Fens and arrive in their natural state for us to peel and chip at the shop each day. We cook with rapeseed oil as it's one of the healthiest oils to use."

Latin style that's knitted to conscience

AN international business showcasing the work of rural Bolivian women and taking it to stylish boutiques across Europe has become a success story for entrepreneur Carolina Reinhardt.

A native of the landlocked country in South America, Reinhardt runs her business from her Ashford home.

Boutiques in Tenterden, Cranbrook and Hawkhurst are the latest to stock her unique designs, handmade from the coat of the alpaca.

The knitwear, which includes jumpers, dresses and shawls, have also proven popular when sold in outlets in Cologne, Bonn and Zurich.

This summer her work will be displayed in London as the fashion industry shows off its new designs.

"I was born in Santa Cruz, Bolivia, but left when I was 17 to study fashion, first in Argentina, before moving to Virginia, USA," she said.

"I then lived in Europe before

CREATIONS: Carolina Reinhardt's business uses alpaca wool from Bolivia to make designer clothing coming to England and establishing my business."

At her home, Reinhardt, director of CHK Fashion, designs her range, focusing on modern styling, shapes and colours.

Then, once or twice a year, she goes back to her home country and employs women from rural communities to make them.

"In Bolivia it is very common for women to be the victims of domestic violence, or to have their husbands leave them," Reinhardt said.

"These women have no real prospects – so I wanted to change things."

"My aim has been to create sustainable employment, provide fair wages, respect labour laws and provide an adequate return and living conditions for these skilled craftsmen."

"I intend to make a difference by bringing some people out of poverty."

Alpacas – which resemble small llamas – are kept in herds that graze on the level heights of the Andes in the north of Bolivia at an altitude of 3,500-5,000 metres.

Unlike the larger and stronger llamas, they are not bred to be beasts of burden but instead are reared specifically for their wool.

Alpaca fibre is used for making knitted and woven items such as blankets, sweaters, hats, gloves, scarves, a wide variety of textiles and ponchos in South America, and sweaters, socks, coats and bedding in other parts of the world.

The fibre comes in more than 52 natural colours.

About 250 women work on Reinhardt's project, some crocheting, some knitting and some using hand-looms.

Reinhardt said: "I am trying to give people a measure of self-respect as well as employment."

"Some of these women may not be able to read or write, but they are incredibly talented with their hands."

"I want to prove to the world that there is a lot of potential in Bolivia."

AWARDS

Recognition is a great deal

CASTLE Corporate Finance has walked away with a hat-trick of awards at Insider's South East Dealmakers Awards 2012.

It was the culmination of an eventful day for Castle, with the team closing a significant business sale earlier that same day.

The Tonbridge firm says staff thoroughly enjoyed their evening at Copthorne Effingham Park near Gatwick, with director Mike Norrie winning the Corporate Finance Adviser Of The Year title and the principal award, Dealmaker Of The Year, presented by Gyles Brandreth.

Norrie, who launched Castle Corporate Finance with Colin Harvey in 2008, was praised at the ceremony as a "real mainstay of the market".

"We were extremely proud to win these high-profile awards," he said. "Last year was busy for us and this one has started well. We work very closely with business-owners, guiding them through what is always an emotional process, helping them to achieve the best outcome for them and their company."

The team was also named lead adviser on the Deal Of The Year, the £18 million sale of Sidcup energy procurement and carbon strategy consultancy Power Efficiency to Balfour Beatty.

"I am proud Power Efficiency is a Castle Corporate Finance deal," said Norrie. "The shareholders are great and thoroughly deserve the award."

Search engine optimisation in a nutshell

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

IF YOU are a business-owner or handle your company's marketing, you are likely to have heard about and deleted numerous emails pertaining to search engine optimisation (SEO).

These are likely to have been from agencies informing you of how they have 'visited your website and noticed that you are not listed in the major search engines and directories', before offering you 'guaranteed top positions', along with a '500 per cent increase in traffic'.

These emails are often a pest to business-owners, but they're also a hindrance to those in the industry. They give SEO-providers a bad reputation and, rather than demystifying the process or demonstrating its importance, serve only to create hostility and apathy toward search engine optimisation.

In recent years SEO has been referred to most commonly as 'a dark art'. This does not accurately describe the process. It can be argued, though, that it is an art: the basic principles are straightforward, but it takes skill and practice to achieve great results.

Search engine optimisation is the process of increasing traffic and enquiries through a website by enhancing your search results in search engines. Search results matter; when your pages have higher rankings, more people can find you.

The use of search engines such as Google is the second most popular online activity (behind only Facebook) and, with the number of internet-users in the UK at more than 51 million, getting your website found is important.

SEO improves the odds of someone finding your company online.

Search engines account for every word on the internet. When someone searches in Google, it narrows results to pages that are only about those words searched for.

So how does SEO get your site to appear high up among those results?

The first step is to know your customers. More specifically, know your potential customers, who they are, what they are looking for and which phrases they could be typing in to Google to find you. With this knowledge, you can identify around which key phrases your website will need to be optimised.

It is important to find the right key phrases – those that will not only spotlight your site in Google searches but that will also drive visitors.

For example, it is all well and good to rank for 'dog grooming in Folkestone', but if nobody is searching for that phrase it's not going to be sending any visitors or shaggy-haired dog-owners your way.

Once you have selected the phrases

RELAX: Search engine optimisation isn't as difficult as you might have thought that will drive traffic and enquiries to your website, on-page optimisation is the next stage of the SEO process, ensuring your site contains these phrases in all the right ways and places.

This means that the phrases are contained in the right amounts – not too much or too little.

You need to implement your phrases in the page copy, check the titles of the pages are appropriate and that you're making full use of images and videos.

In addition, your navigation needs to be easy for both search engines and users to follow and – most importantly – make sure that your site's page code shows all of this.

Once your website itself is optimised, SEO looks at who is linking to your site.

Links to your website matter. More precisely, links from quality, relevant websites to yours matter. It is a recommendation and also a way of pointing out to users and search engines that your site has good information related to your carefully-selected key phrases.

Search engines can detect how many links a site has and tell which of these are relevant. It will give more weight to those from trustworthy and related sites.

Effective SEOs will ensure your site gains links from trustworthy, relevant sites and that those links will be based on your keyphrases rather than your company name.

SEO is fundamental to a successful online marketing campaign.

Accordingly, to really see lasting results from SEO it is important to turn to the experts – not those companies that plague your inbox with extravagant claims but one that fully understands SEO and takes the time to get to know both your business and its customers.

Helen's Quantum leap into PR

ASHFORD public-relations agency Quantum PR has appointed Helen Bell as its new senior account manager.

Bell, 30, who lives in Ashford, joins Quantum from her previous role as communications executive for Laing O'Rourke.

She has also worked as press and PR officer for the BBC, dealing with external publicity for the South and South East region.

Previously she worked in the press office at Kent Police for some four years, handling media enquiries and crisis communications.

After studying for her A-levels in English and media at Canterbury College, Bell embarked on a career in radio, progressing from travel reporter to news editor at competition for most vacancies and that people looking for work need all the help they can get, which is why we're offering our customers this free service.

"Residents have been overwhelmingly receptive to the campaign so far.

"We're encouraging customers to come in store and take advantage of this free service. Simply bring your CV to any of the stores and we will happily print it for free."

John Richardson, UK chairman for Cartridge World, said: "Unemployment is a crucial problem facing our economy today and printing CVs is one small way we can use our resources to help those who need it.

"A good CV can make you stand out from the crowd and ensure your job application moves to the top of the pile."

Take on an apprentice... it matters

THANET COLLEGE has thrown down the gauntlet, inviting all businesses in the area to take on an apprentice this year.

During National Apprenticeship Week, Thanet College laid down the challenge in an attempt to tackle the continued rise in unemployment, which has led to Thanet having the highest rate of youth unemployment in the South East.

The numbers of young people who are now unemployed have reached the million mark nationally – the highest rate in 20 years – and there is no sign that things are about to get better.

One way in which local businesses can take on a young person is through an apprenticeship. This is where the employer gains someone bespoke to their needs and in a cost-effective way (limited to a commitment of one year in many cases) and the employee gains on-the-job training, vital job-specific skills and qualifications that are crucial to career progression.

Apprenticeships can bring increased productivity and develop a workforce needed both now and into the future, bringing fresh talent and new thinking and filling skill gaps. Thanet College's business division, Training Solutions, offers assistance in achieving this.

David Foley, chief executive of Thanet and East Kent Chamber of Commerce, says that Training Solutions is making taking on an apprentice easier than ever. He said: "Nine out of 10 companies in Thanet have fewer than 20 workers.

"In the past, these firms may have dismissed the opportunity to take on an apprentice as being too cumbersome, time-consuming or simply too much like hard work.

"With the procedures being outlined by organisations such as Training Solutions, the administrative burden is significantly reduced so that even quite small enterprises can see an immediate benefit.

"We urge all companies in Thanet to consider the new apprenticeship schemes and so discover how their operations, margins and future prospects can be improved with the addition of an on-site apprentice."

Kirsty Bryant, Head of Training Solutions, is passionate about her organisation's ability to help improve things for Thanet and east Kent.

She said: "There is a growing consensus that without further action we risk creating a 'lost generation' of young people in this country.

"Obviously the situation is multiplied in this region due to higher rates of youth unemployment than average.

"These people will be shut out of the labour market and increasingly disconnected from the world of work or learning – this will, over time, have an impact on local skills levels, which in turn will have a knock-on effect on the success of existing business as well as our ability to attract new employers to the area.

"Should this situation occur, it would limit employment opportunities more generally and ultimately reduce people's quality of life and environment, which has far-reaching and long-lasting implications and will impact on every man, woman and child living in this area – it's as serious as that.

"I urge all businesses in Thanet, big and small, to give Training Solutions a call.

"Even if you don't think an apprentice is for you, or you don't think you can afford one at the moment, there are so many Government grants and incentives available at present and I am confident we can help find a solution to benefit your business and thus subsequently help support our local economy."

Company trains future managers

MOVE management firm Sargents has launched an apprenticeship programme developed with employability and skills provider Skills Training UK.

The company, based on the Fordgate Business Park in Thamesmead, and owned by Restore plc, provides move management and storage services in London and the South East.

Managing director Mark Rousell said: "At Sargents, we are always striving to do better and so the continuous professional development of our staff is a major priority.

"I am delighted that we have developed our apprenticeships programme which will help us ensure all our staff have the skills and the discipline we need to provide our customers with truly excellent service."

The team-leading apprenticeship programme will help ensure a pipeline of employees who have developed the specific skills required for supervisory roles in the business. The apprenticeship includes areas like time management; communication; handling paperwork and problem solving.

Currently nine staff members are working towards National Vocational Qualifications at Level 2 in Team Leading, with a further 12 staff enrolling on the programme throughout February.

Plumbers clean up at ceremony

APPRENTICE plumbers studying at MidKent College have been recognised as being among the best craftsmen in the country.

Richard Pettitt, 42, from Rochester, and Paul Hopper, 23, from Swanscombe, were honoured as part of the apprentice, journeyman and master certificate scheme at a special ceremony.

The annual event – held at Plaisterers' Hall, London – is organised by the Construction Livery Group with the Livery Companies Skills Council, and City and Guilds.

Stuart Nice, MidKent College's head of construction and building services, said: "These two students are a credit to themselves, their employers and the college.

"These talented individuals have both demonstrated outstanding aptitude and ability, and have the potential to make a major contribution within the plumbing industry."

Paul and Richard are currently studying for their Level 3 NVQs in plumbing and heating.

Paul has more than five years' experience as a plumbing and heating engineer, while Richard works for Southern Water as a water regulations officer.

Success comes to those who wait, proves Amy

SHE started her working life waiting tables but after completing an apprenticeship she knew the right career was waiting for her.

Amy Nichols, 19, studied public services at college and worked as a waitress during evenings and weekends.

When her course finished, she had a decision to make. She found out about KEY Training Services and took up an apprenticeship within Kent County Council's special educational needs team.

Amy said: "Once college had finished, I continued to work as a waitress part time for a couple of months. I didn't feel that working in a restaurant was something I wanted to do as a career.

"I wanted to have a full-time job but at the same time I knew I needed to improve my skills and qualifications if I wanted to work in an office. Employers tend to want you to have experience as well as skills, so an apprenticeship is good for that – because it gives you that experience and gets a foot in the door.

"Following my apprenticeship, I was given the opportunity to take up a secondment for a team that I helped out during my time as an apprentice.

"I've managed to successfully secure a permanent job in KCC and am continuing to learn and enhance my skills.

"If it wasn't for the apprenticeship scheme, I might still be waiting and on the same wage. I would like to work my way up at KCC and possibly consider undertaking further education alongside of my work."

Amy was one of several young people who collected certificates during National Apprenticeship Week to mark the end of their training.

Five Kent companies that offer apprenticeships – Bedfont Scientific, Kent Gateway Block Management, Kent Police Authority, Lewis Waterman, and Woodlands Day Centre – were also thanked for giving school-leavers opportunities to start out on the career ladder.

KCC deputy cabinet member for education, learning and skills, Cllr Gary Cooke, said: "I am grateful to all the employers that are offering apprenticeships. These days we are looking at some of the toughest economic conditions that have existed since the war.

"Young people have to make themselves as employable as they can. Employers that come forward and work with KCC and other providers to take on apprentices is absolutely fantastic and I cannot say enough to thank them all."

KEY Training Services has been established for 30 years and is a work-based training provider, providing training solutions to both companies and individuals across the county.

KEY Training Services works with more than 300 employers throughout Kent, delivering apprenticeships and National Vocational Qualifications, and has helped more than 25,000 people to realise their career ambitions.

Rotary members help get students ready to join the world of working THANET Rotarians are helping Marlowe Academy students to hone their job interview skills and to perfect their CVs.

Members of the Rotary Club of Thanet used to run mock interviews but have now turned their attention to a more targeted mentoring scheme which helps to boost the students' confidence.

Some 20 students have benefited from the scheme so far, including work experience placements and advice.

One student interested in politics was given guidance by a Rotarian and Kent county councillor. Another student who wished to join the police has had meetings with serving police officers.

The new-style mentoring scheme was introduced by Thanet Rotarian, Michael Studham. He said: "I have done this mentoring within the Association of Chartered Certified Accountants and it struck me that it would be better to have something on-going and less stressful for students than mock interviews."

Recently, The Marlowe Academy thanked the Rotary Club by giving members a dinner in their honour and staging a production showcasing the work of all ages of the Academy's performing art students in drama, music and dance.

The Rotarians insisted on paying for their meal and the money was donated to on-site radio station, Academy FM.

Industry gives backing for UCA Creative Challenge programme

THE University for the Creative Arts has gathered together an array of creative industry leaders and experts to find the most innovative student in the South East as part of the Creative Challenge programme.

Uwe Derksen, Director of Research + Enterprise at UCA, said: "The Creative Challenge is our annual industry-led programme that helps our most talented students develop their creative business and innovation skills; applied in the context of real world complex demands."

"The Creative Challenge culminates in a competition to find the most enterprising and innovative students at the university. Expert business people will nurture students with brilliant ideas through a development programme. The programme is designed to identify 10 finalists in May."

The competition is open to all students at the University for the Creative Arts. The top 50 finalists have just been announced and are from all five campuses across UCA. Ideas are top secret and range in theme and discipline. All 50 students will now benefit from this exciting industry-led programme.

DESIGNER: Kane O'Flaherty gets his award

Last year's winner Kane O'Flaherty said: "The Creative Challenge pushed my creative flair, enhanced my technical skills and increased my self-confidence... I found myself as a designer."

Past supporters have included industry leaders Karen Millen, Wayne Hemmingsway, Sony and Kia UK, and this year the competition is being supported by more than 30 businesses including Virgin Media, Sony Computer Entertainment, and Kanoti.

Also new this year is the support of Creative Barcode, which has provided each of the top 50 students with an account so all their work and ideas over the coming year will be protected.

Science project takes four pupils all the way to the big bang finals

CHAUCER Technology School pupils are top of the class after winning a place in the finals of the 2012 National Science and Engineering Competition.

Philip Clark, Libbie Norton, Chantelle Martin and Daniel Keen impressed judges by setting themselves the task of reducing the school carbon dioxide output by 10 per cent.

They will now go head to head with students from across the country in an attempt to claim one of the UK's most prestigious science and engineering honours for young people.

Philip, Libbie, Chantelle and Daniel's shortlisted entry will be presented to more than 30,000 people at The Big Bang UK Young Scientists and Engineers Fair, the country's single biggest celebration of science and engineering for young people, held at the NEC, Birmingham from March 15-17.

The world-class judging panel includes renowned space scientist Dr Maggie Aderin-Pocock, Nobel Prize winning biochemist Sir Tim Hunt, and the Science Museum's inventor in residence Mark Champkins, among others.

The pupils said: "We so proud that our project has made it into the finals of the National Science and Engineering Competition. It really encouraged us to think about science and engineering in a new light and helped us to realise what fun we could have."

SKILFUL KENT

EMPLOYMENT

Clegg pledges millions to help 'neets'

DEPUTY Prime Minister Nick Clegg has promised to deal with the "ticking timebomb" of teenagers who are not in work, school or training with a massive cash injection.

On Tuesday he announced a £126 million scheme to get 16- and 17-year-olds back into employment or education.

The initiative is part of the Government's Youth Contract scheme announced last November, which is aimed at tackling unemployment among young people.

But business representatives say that for the scheme to work commitment and the right attitude need to be shown by the young people taking part – otherwise their worth to companies is negligible.

Under the scheme, charities and businesses will be invited to bid for contracts worth up to £2,200 to take on teenagers and will receive an initial payment up front, followed by more money when the youngsters show progress. At least 55,000 so-called 'neets' – not in education, employment or training – who have no GCSEs at grade C or above are expected to benefit.

Mr Clegg said: "Sitting at home with nothing to do when you're so young can knock the stuffing out of you for years. It is a tragedy for the young people involved – a ticking timebomb for the economy and our society as a whole.

"This problem isn't new, but in the current economic climate we urgently need to step up efforts to ensure some of our most troubled teenagers have the skills, confidence and opportunities to succeed."

The news has been welcomed by Kent's business community, but the Federation of Small Businesses emphasised that the young people themselves had to demonstrate the right attitude when it came to the workplace.

Roger House, FSB chairman for Kent and Medway, said: "Employers need enthusiastic young people, ready to work. The right attitude and work ethic are essential and under the Youth Contract young people will be able to demonstrate their value in the workplace and to the business.

"Schools provide students with knowledge and skills. However, businesses rank attitude as very important: interpersonal communication, team-working, punctuality and self-discipline. Sadly, these qualities are absent in some youngsters."

"To assist schools to better prepare their students for employment the FSB

INVESTMENT: The scheme aims to get more of our young people working in Kent is backing Young Enterprise, encouraging participation in its Company Programme, which will provide insight into the world of business, commerce and entrepreneurship."

This age group has been singled out because evidence suggests that unemployment early on in a person's working life can have a permanent effect on earning potential.

Statistically, at age 42, someone who has been frequently unemployed as a teenager is likely to earn up to 15 per cent less than his or her peers, the Department for Education said.

The announcement comes after the latest unemployment figures showed that the numbers of 16- to 24-year-olds not in work increased by 22,000 to 1.04 million in the three months to December. Figures for the third quarter of last year, showed that more than a million 16- to 24-year-olds, or 1,163,000 – almost one in five, were considered to be neets.

Mr Clegg said: "Many of them will have complex problems... truancy, teenage pregnancy, a lack of GCSEs and health problems.

"Helping them on their feet will not be without challenges and Government cannot do this alone. But we all have a duty to reach out to the young people who can be hardest to reach.

"That's why today I am calling on charities and other organisations at the coalface to work with Government to help tens and thousands of lost teenagers on to a brighter path."

The scheme will give businesses complete freedom in how they provide their support.

Tim Loughton, Children and Young People's Minister, said: "Providers know how best to support young people back into education training and employment. We are looking forward to receiving some innovative ideas that really work from experienced organisations in all sectors."

The path then joins with AE271 on map sheet 145 (TR145W).

All distances are approximate, all directions are general.

A copy of the Order and Map may be seen free of charge during normal office hours at the offices of Ashford Borough Council, Ashford Gateway Plus, Church Road, Ashford, Kent, TN23 1AS or at the Kent County Council, Countryside Access Service, Invicta House, County Hall, Maidstone, Kent ME14 1XX. Copies of the Order and Map may also be purchased there.

Any representation about or objection to the Order must be sent or delivered in writing to Matthew Garvey at the Kent County Council (address as below) no later than 09 April 2012. Please state the grounds on which they are made.

Please note that objections/representations cannot be treated as confidential and may come into the public domain. Copies of any objections or representations received may be disclosed to interested parties, including the Planning Inspectorate where the case is referred to it for determination.

If no such representations or objections are duly made to the Order (or to any part of it), or if any so made are withdrawn, the Kent County Council, instead of submitting the Order to the Secretary of State (or part of it if the Authority has by Notice to the Secretary of State so elected under paragraph 5 of schedule 15 to the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981) may itself confirm the Order (or that part of the Order). If the Order is sent to the Secretary of State for the Environment (in whole or in part), any representations or objections which have been duly made and not been withdrawn will be sent with it.

THE KENT COUNTY COUNCIL (TOVIL ROAD, MAIDSTONE) (PUFFIN CROSSING)

ROAD TRAFFIC REGULATION ACT 1984

NOTICE is hereby given that the Kent County Council, in exercise of its powers under Section 23 of the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984 and all other enabling powers, intends to convert the existing Zebra Crossing to a Puffin Crossing on Tovil Road, Maidstone, Kent, which is located approximately 33 metres south west of the mid point of its junction with Eccleston Road and Courtenay Road.

The purpose of the scheme is to provide a safe place for pedestrians to cross as there are concerns over pedestrian safety within the area. The existing Zebra Crossing is used by an increased number of school children and shoppers using nearby facilities and a high population from the surrounding residential housing estates.

The features of a Puffin Crossing include facilities to cancel pedestrian demands when they cross in the gaps in traffic and to allow for varying clearance times after the pedestrian green signal, to allow for slow pedestrians without harassment from drivers. The pedestrians in the area would therefore benefit from the introduction of a Puffin Crossing to assist with the high pedestrian movement throughout the area.

Jacobs Engineering UK LTD. has been commissioned by the Council to publish the Notice of intent at the same time as providing notification to all interested parties and complies with the requirements of Section 23(2) of the Road Traffic Regulation Act, 1984.

Copies of the plan showing this proposal an explanatory statement and a map showing the extents of the scheme may be inspected during normal office hours at The Kent County Council Offices, Sessions House, County Road, Maidstone, Kent, ME14 1XX, and at Maidstone Borough Council Offices, Maidstone House, King Street, Maidstone, Kent, ME15 6HQ.

CURTIS LANE, STELLING MINNIS (PROHIBITION OF DRIVING) TEMPORARY ORDER 2012

Because of essential carriageway repairs, Kent County Council has made an Order prohibiting through traffic on Curtis Lane, Stelling Minnis, on or after 27 February 2012 for up to 2 days or until the works have been completed.

The road will be closed between the junctions with Stone Street and Bossingham Road.

The alternative route is via B2068 Stone Street, Grannies Hill, Lime Kiln Lane, The Street and Bossingham Street.

Every effort will be made to try and maintain access when it is safe to do so, but due to the nature of the works, inevitably there will be times when this is not possible.

Highways - District of Swale

WESTERN AVENUE, SHEERNESS (PROHIBITION OF DRIVING) TEMPORARY ORDER 2012

THE ROAD TRAFFIC REGULATION ACT 1984 AS AMENDED BY THE ROAD TRAFFIC (TEMPORARY RESTRICTIONS) ACT 1991

Because of drainage improvement works to alleviate flooding, Kent County Council intends to make an Order prohibiting through traffic on Western Avenue, Sheerness, on or after 12 March 2012 for up to 4 days or until the works have been completed.

THE KENT COUNTY COUNCIL (VARIOUS ROADS, THANET) (SPEED LIMITS) ORDER 2012

NOTICE is hereby given that the Kent County Council, in exercise of its powers proposes to make an Order under Sections 1(i), 2(i) and 2(2), Sections 81 to 84 of and part IV of Schedule 9 of the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984 as amended, the effect of which will introduce reduced speed limits to be enforced on the lengths of roads approaching and including the roundabout junctions and link road between them in the area commonly known as "Lord of the Manor".

Following on from the consultation carried out in January 2012 the Kent County Council has amended the proposals at the "Lord of the Manor" roundabout area from a proposed 30 mph speed limit to a proposed 40 mph speed limit.

As part of Kent County Council's regeneration programme, Phase 1 of East Kent Access was constructed and opened several years ago and Phase 2 included the construction of the A299 Hengist Way, from "Minster roundabout", eastwards to "Cliffsend roundabout", southwards to "Sevenscore roundabout" and eastwards to "Lord of the Manor junction"; and the A256 Richborough Way from "Sevenscore roundabout", southwards to "Ebbsfleet roundabout" and A256 Ramsgate Road, from "Ebbsfleet roundabout," southwards to "Richborough roundabout".

This section of works will reduce the speed limit on the approaches to the "Lord of the Manor" roundabouts, the circulatory carriageways and the link road between them, to 40 mph.

The length of the existing 40 mph speed limit on the A299 Canterbury Road East will be extended in a westerly direction from its current boundary adjacent to its junction with Windermere Avenue, to its southern roundabout junction with "Lord of the Manor"; and the length of the existing 40 mph speed limit on Sandwich Road will be extended in a north easterly direction from a point 23 metres north east of the mid point of its junction with Cliffs End Road to the southern roundabout at the junction commonly known as "Lord of the Manor".

Jacobs Engineering UK Ltd has been commissioned to work in partnership with the Kent County Council to progress the legal procedures necessary to implement the proposed measures.

A copy of the scheme proposal, an explanatory statement and a plan showing the extents of the scheme can be inspected during normal office hours at the Kent County Council Offices, Sessions House, County Road, Maidstone, Kent, ME14 1XQ, Thanet District Council Offices, PO Box 9, Cecil Street, Margate, Kent, CT9 1XZ, and affected Parish and Town Councils which are: Cliffsend PC, Manston PC and Ramsgate TC.

Anyone wishing to support these proposals, or object to them, should write to Diane Bourne, Jacobs Engineering UK Ltd, Miller House, Lower Stone Street, Maidstone, Kent, ME15 6GB, quoting the name of the Order and reference No "B1425100" and stating their reasons, by no later than Monday 19th March 2012.

THE INTERVIEW

Reginald D Hunter

An American comic in England? Now that was never in the plan

Joe Bill discovers an already popular stand-up feels he has yet to really hit his peak

THE deep, southern American accent of Reginald D Hunter is unmistakable. Taking time out from his busy schedule, sitting in a waiting room at BBC's Western House in London, the most sought-after comedian of the moment chatted tiredly to yet another journalist.

He said: "My, my, my, where are you now? Kent? There are some dangerous letter-writers in Kent. The BBC is terrified of letter-writers from Kent. I don't know why."

The 42-year-old is touring with his new show, Sometimes Even The Devil Tells The Truth, as well as appearing on TV to promote it and continuing his regular commitments to comedy panel shows.

He explained what his new tour was about: "There is a similar set of topics for this tour: destruction, terror, mayhem, but with a humorous and emotional twist, basically."

"None of it is controversial to me, but then I am not white middle class, so we won't know until I say it," he said.

The story of how he got into comedy is well known, but Hunter tells it anyway just for interview protocol.

"It was just some guys talking at a bar, talking junk, and I was blowing off some steam."

"My mate was, like, 'I bet you wouldn't be this funny on stage', and I was, like, 'Damn, where the stage at, I don't care'... know what I am saying?"

The giant American explained that the same questions kept cropping up with journalists and he wanted to talk about something else, so my line of questions changed rapidly and I asked what on Earth brought him to this rainy island in the first place.

A far more enthusiastic Reginald D Hunter emerged.

He said: "I wanted to see something different, feel something different, think something different, and I knew that wasn't very likely if I stayed over in Georgia. England was as far as my money and wits could take me."

"I actually came here to study acting. I was only supposed to be here a few months and then go back and start acting in New York or LA or whatever place would hire me, but what is that thing that Christians say? Your plan is what God likes to listen to when he wants a laugh."

The Georgian, known for his political satire, quick wit and laid-back, deadpan style, explained that comedy was, like many others, something he stumbled upon.

He said: "The acting stuff worked out OK, but it was just a short course. I didn't have the money for anything more. It ran its course and I ran its course. I came out of it and said 'Oh crap!' because I didn't know what to do."

"I didn't have a plan. I was like Indiana Jones in that first movie, just making it up as I go along. I was just going by what felt right, or where I could get a sandwich."

Hunter now has a career laden with critical acclaim, receiving Perrier Award nominations for his first three Edinburgh Fringe Festivals. He has also made his mark on the nation's DVD shelves with the November release of a show shot over two nights in June last year at London's Hammersmith Apollo.

However, comedy couldn't have been further from his mind while growing up in the deep south.

"I only started fiddling around with acting in my late teens, late in college," he said. "When I was a kid I had fantasies of becoming the president or a senator or an astronaut, all things little American boys dream about."

"When I was 14 I wanted to play baseball; at 16 I wanted to be a professional chess-player; and when I was seven I wanted to be a pimp for a little while."

But despite his success both in the UK and back across the pond, Hunter has no plans of getting "too big"...

"World domination? Nah, if I attain world domination it would only be for the brief period of setting the world free. I want to be free, but you can't be free by yourself."

But the six-foot-plus comedian does believe there is still more to come from his locker of laughter.

He said: "I believe I am yet to peak, but I don't know how true that is because everyone is delusional and thinks that."

"I feel as though I am entering the second act of my play of whatever my life is."

FUNNY GUY:
Reginald D Hunter

We will figure out what act two is. I hope I either keep peaking and act two will be great and act three will be even better, or I die real quickly and go straight to legend status."

"That way is almost preferable as you get to do a lot less work."

Hunter has John Gordo opening the show for him, a man whom the stand-up says was an inspiration to him and a former flatmate.

"He is one of my mentors. The lessons that John has taught me resound in my ears."

"The first big gig I did after the first Perrier nomination was at His Majesty's Theatre [in Aberdeen]. I'd never seen three tiers of people looking at me before – it was a little like a deer caught in the headlights."

"He taught me that if you want to be a stand-up, then you cannot be beaten by a building, you cannot let the prestige or reputation or the lavishness of a place intimidate you. As a stand-up you're supposed to have an inherent disrespect for every building you're in."

Hunter remains constantly on our TVs, appearing on 8 Out Of 10 Cats and Mock The Week, but he has a place in his heart for one particular show.

"The best panel show is Have I Got News For You," he said. "They have been doing it a long time. They are like an old leather coat you have that just knows your shape and your grooves."

"They don't have the same level of tension that others have. There is a difference in working with old pros to working with people trying to establish something."

"Other shows often have panic about them and they make you show up at two, whereas the old pros just say 'Just show up at five, make something up, you'll be all right.'"

Clearly, given the success enjoyed by Reginald D Hunter, there's something to be said for that.

EATING OUT

Across the county

New Mint Leaf Indian offers quality cuisine

THE newly-opened classic Indian restaurant, the Mint Leaf Lounge, is ready for business.

Both clean and modern inside, the restaurant is dedicated to serving freshly-cooked traditional Indian cuisine.

Fresh ingredients and aromatic flavours will tempt any spice fan to one of the team's special banqueting nights, which run every Tuesday for just £10.95.

The group's motto is Simply Scrumptious And Irresistible and it believes that every Indian enthusiast should try out some of the Mint Leaf Lounge's speciality dishes. These include the Bengali-style gosht kodu, murgh makhani chicken, the batok salon roasted duck and the spicy naga lamb.

There are still some of the very popular dishes such as passandas, kormas and baltis, so there is something to satisfy everyone.

With the order service available online, the Mint Leaf Lounge is ready for takeaway orders offering a free bottle of Indian beer as part of the service.

It also offers a delivery service to customers inside a four-mile radius.

Children under five eat for free and there is free parking at the front of the restaurant.

ALL ARE WELCOME:
The See Ho can cater for both small or large groups of up to 30 people

Walkers love the taste of the countryside at The See Ho

THE See Ho is a busy, friendly country pub that serves great beers and a vast range of home-prepared dishes.

Early-bird specials, dinners, Sunday roasts and fresh fish are all features that attract customers to the varied menu, which uses as much local produce as possible.

The eatery lies just off the M2 so is perfect for a quick drink or even a relaxing dinner after a hard day's shopping at Bluewater.

It is also near a lovely stretch of countryside and is very popular with walkers and ramblers. Both small or large groups of up to 30 can be catered for after a stroll or hike through the excellent local landscape.

Current top-sellers on the menu are the delicious home-made rabbit pie and the steak-in-ale pie. All dishes on the menu are home-made and the See Ho offers a two-meals-for-£10 special.

Other treats on the menu include meatloaf mash with fresh veg-tables, or perhaps fishcakes, chips and peas, and there are various pasties with chips and peas or beans.

All of the dishes are complemented by excellent beers and wines, which the knowledgeable staff ensure are kept perfectly.

Fresh food at very reasonable prices is the key to the success of the venue, which is now taking bookings for Easter week, when there will be special guests taking up the microphone and performing live in-house.

The See Ho is open from 11am until 3pm at lunchtime and 6pm until 11pm each evening, seven days a week. Well worth the walk!

Savour a blooming excellent meal

BLOOMERS Restaurant at the Overcliffe Hotel is a rare gem that should not be missed. Established in 1980, it is one of the best-kept secrets in Kent, offering excellent food and an ambience second to none.

The bar, restaurant and conservatory are all candlelit at night, giving the place a dreamlike quality – ideal for that very special meal with the most important person in your life.

Most Saturdays the resident pianist will serenade diners on the grand piano, performing an excellent selection of music to suit every mood.

This relaxing experience can be added to as diners sit back with a perfectly-chilled glass of champagne or an expertly-mixed cocktail in the bright conservatory.

You can also choose from the first-class menu and extensive wine list.

Drinks can be served alfresco in the garden as spring and summer roll up.

In previous years those who have enjoyed the atmosphere include former Prime Minister Tony Blair, comedians such as Bernard Manning and Freddie Starr and entertainers Gerry and the Pacemakers, Rick Wakeman and Max Boyce. There is even a celebrity corner, where guests and diners can check out who has gone before them. The restaurant has appeared on BBC television.

It is open to non-residents for dinner each evening, but to make the experience complete why not book a room and stay over?

The hotel is ideally situated for the town centre, the local railway station and Ebbsfleet International station.

Why you should plough a joyful furrow towards this rural gem

A DARK and winding road through woods and across fields was the perfect prologue to a meal on the green.

Stalisfield Green, to be precise, home to The Plough, a traditional country pub built almost 600 years ago that sits proudly in the middle of nowhere. But what a gem...

A roaring fire, beams and tight bar set the tone for what was to be a cosy and delicious meal for two. Seated in old armchairs, we were greeted warmly and given a choice of drinks, almost all originating from the surrounding area, and all definitely brewed in Kent.

We were handed our printed menus featuring meals and ingredients sourced from Kentish farmers, fishermen and brewers.

Each dish had a name and the location from where it was sourced. And on consultation with our attendant we were assured of the quality ingredients available, with the old 'We know the farmer personally' line.

As The Plough representative had promised, we were not disappointed. To start, I opted for mussels steamed in Biddenden cider (£7.95). Without beating about the bush, they were the best mussels I have ever eaten. They were juicy, oozing flavour and cooked to perfection, with none of the usual garlic war. Questioning the waiter on where they were from, I was told that usually the mussels used are from Hythe Bay, but because of the time of year these were from Shetland, where the colder water was more beneficial to growth. That will do for me.

My guest opted for the curried parsnip soup with sesame straws (£6.50) – the thumbs-up came as the creamy soup was polished off without a hint of fatigue.

For mains I was swayed from the Romney mutton pie by the Farmer Palmer's 28-day Angus steak with chips, mushroom, slow-roasted tomato and chop house sauce. I chose the rump rather than the sirloin at £16.95.

Medium rare I ordered, medium rare it arrived, an overlooked skill. The steak arrived separate to the home-cooked, crispy chips, promoting its magnitude.

It was everything a steak should be, juicy but not fatty... excellently done. I almost wish I had gone for the sirloin because I can't imagine how the higher grade tasted.

My guest went for the Monkshill Farm Kentish ranger chicken with smoked bacon (£15.25). A quick taste confirmed the presentation wasn't just a façade – succulent with no hint of dryness.

The Plough's home-made ice-cream (£4) – we chose the praline and chocolate-brownie flavours – was a perfectly light end to the meal.

Many businesses want to buy into the idea of locally-sourced food, but here it was done properly for just £59.75 for two. They say that if you have a good meal you will tell five people... a bad one, you will tell 15. After this joyous experience, those figures should change.

FARMERS' MARKETS

DARTFORD: The market began in November 2005 at the request of Dartford Borough Council and has been running since then. It is held in the pedestrian area of Dartford high street and is open to the public between 10am and 2pm on the third Friday of the month.

EGERTON: This farmers' market has now been trading every Friday from 2pm to 4.30pm for almost five years, with most of the original stall-holders still selling at the market in the Millennium Hall.

MERSHAM: Featuring produce from the immediate area is the market now held at the Farriers Arms, Mersham Forstal, between 2.30pm and 6.30pm on every second and fourth Friday of the month.

MEOPHAM: This farmers' market has been operating since July 2004 in the overflow car-park of the Meopham fitness and tennis centre on the first Sunday of the month from 9am to 12.30pm.

HILDENBOROUGH: Every Tuesday in St John's Church Centre the Hildenborough farmers' market has an average of 20 stalls each week offering a wide range of fresh local produce of high quality at competitive prices.

IWADE: The village-hall farmers' market opened in February 2009; it takes place on the first Sunday of the month from 10am to 1pm, offering seasonal local produce.

www.gigantic.com

KENT hearts will skip a beat as they prepare to get down with the trumpets to The X Factor's Olly Murs and Rizzle Kicks at Quex Park. Murs, right, has announced he is set to headline the Sound Island Festival at Quex Park, Birchington, and confirmed the first of his guests will be chart-topping collaborators Rizzle Kicks, performing to an expected audience of 10,000. Since coming second in 2009's series of The X Factor, the singer-songwriter has bagged a double-platinum-selling debut album, two top-five singles, the first of which, Please Don't Let Me Go, reached the No 1 spot. He recently collaborated with

Was this the first real detective story? The Woman In White

Trinity Theatre, Tunbridge Wells
Tuesday, February 28-Saturday, March 3
01892 678678

OFTEN considered to be the first real detective story, this new adaptation of Wilkie Collins's 19th-century novel The Woman In White heads to the Trinity Theatre this week. The story revolves around Sir Percival Glyde, who is hounded for money by his old friend, the sinister Count Fosco, so his marriage to the heiress Laura Fairlie is for one reason only... her fortune. As events unfold, Glyde's behaviour becomes more desperate as he attempts to secure Laura's money. The show is an intriguing mix of disturbing greed, romance and mystery. Trinity will be running evening and matinee showings of this entertaining and gripping production. Tickets cost £12.50 each night, with the matinee performance at £7.50. Phone the box office on 01892 678678 or visit www.trinitytheatre.net.

Let the trains take the main stage Steam festival

The Historic Dockyard, Chatham
Sunday and Monday, April 8-9
www.thedockyard.co.uk

FANS of old-time transport will get the chance to let off steam at The Historic Dockyard, Chatham, over Easter. Now in its 10th year, organisers are focusing this year's Medway Festival Of Steam And Transport on trains. Joining the specialist vehicles will be a new Steampunk village, a folk and blues music stage and an Airfix 'make-and-take' section. The dockyard's own locomotive Ajax will be on show, along with the 1895 Aveling & Porter Sydenham and 1936 Peckett. There is also the guest engine Victory, an ex-dockyard locomotive returning to Chatham on one of its first outings following restoration.

Music maestro is still rocking Nick Lowe

Thursday, March 1

A TRUE legend comes to Kent in March when musical genius Nick Lowe brings his band to Tunbridge Wells for a jam session. The creative force behind Brinsley Schwarz and Stiff Records and now on his own successful solo career, Lowe is widely recognised as one of the UK's finest performers and songwriters. His latest album, At My Age, is sure to get a good airing at Tunbridge Wells, but his old classics are never neglected. A regular on Later... with Jules Holland, Lowe has proved just how good he is live, so you really won't be disappointed. Tickets cost £24.50 and are available through the box office on 01892 530613 or via www.assemblyhalltheatre.co.uk.

The Great British Home Show

The one-stop-shop for everything you want your home to be

By Gary Wright

THE Great British Home Show 2012 will be held in Kent's new £60 million events venue, Glow, Bluewater, over the bank holiday and Diamond Jubilee weekend from Thursday, May 31, to Monday, June 4.

The show's theme 'Reveal Your Hidden Home' recognises people are choosing to stay where they already live and improve their surroundings rather than uproot to a new home, and will showcase thousands of inspirational ideas and products from the best that Britain has to offer.

Alongside hundreds of Great British Home Show exhibitors, there will be a spectacular Diamond Jubilee street party across one level of the Glow complex, complete with a village green, central bandstand, sports village and traditional market stalls, all surrounded by some amazing gardens designed especially for the show.

The street party will give visitors the chance to step back in time and peek inside a typical house from 1952 to see how life in the great British home has changed since the Queen ascended to the throne.

"This is a unique exhibition which will bring a new experience for visitors offering a great day out with the chance to see and buy all the latest in contemporary design for the home and garden," said Nick James, event director for All About Brands, the company behind the show.

A STARRING ROLE: Glow, Bluewater, is Kent's new £60 million events venue that will host the show Exhibitors are being chosen to ensure visitors can discover the widest possible range of contemporary and traditional home design from furnishings, kitchens and bathrooms to the way to integrate the latest technology in your home.

There will be demonstrations and advice from celebrity experts, which will include choosing the right interior schemes and utilising the very latest colours and materials through to exciting ways to make the most of the space you have indoors and out.

"There is no need to move home, this show will focus on making the very best of what you have. We are sure every visitor will leave the show bursting with ideas and inspiration," said Nick.

"The Great British Home Show will give visitors a fun-packed family day out.

"The show has been designed with a single goal in mind: to create a one-stop-shop for everything to do with the home. It's a 'must-attend' event for anyone with an interest in interiors, gardens, DIY and design."

No small wonder UK gardeners are

By Gary Wright

JAPANESE gardens have evolved since they came to the West 200 years ago and have proved increasingly popular in the UK as they create a calm, tranquil space away from hectic modern life.

These traditional gardens often feature miniature idealised landscapes that can be abstract and highly stylised.

Howard Healey is an award-winning landscaper who also runs Rhino Rock, Europe's most comprehensive Japanese garden centre near Tonbridge.

He will be building a unique Japanese City Courtyard show garden complete with water feature for The Great British Home Show 2012 (at Glow, Bluewater, from Thursday, May 31, to Monday, June 4) which will be displayed among specially-designed gardens on level one, where the Great British Street Party will take place to celebrate the Diamond Jubilee of Queen Elizabeth II.

Mr Healey, who leads this small, family-run business, said: "In 1992 we custom-built a unique Japanese garden and water garden centre to display a comprehensive range of Japanese garden materials, water features and Bonsai trees.

"Our business has grown since then and we are now recognised as one of the premier suppliers of Japanese garden materials.

"A thorough knowledge of the subject, the love of transforming the client's dream into reality, and the quality construction of our gardens is the most satisfying aspect to our work."

These include granite benches, bridges for water gardens, stepping stones and some unique paving materials.

Many of the designs are exclusive to Rhino Rock and all are hand-carved to very high standards from a 'fine fleck' granite.

The nursery features attractive display gardens to help visitors visualise what can be achieved in small spaces.

All the Japanese lanterns, water basins and water features are tastefully displayed and available for purchase from stock.

Drilled rock water features and an exciting range of exclusive contemporary designs hand-carved in granite can be bought as a DIY kit with all the necessary pumps, hosepipe, pond-liner, water tanks and other accessories.

Mr Healey said: "Our drilled rocks are the most natural of all water features and will add charm to any garden. We drill the rock ourselves and have a huge selection to choose from.

"Our innovative lighting options add a sparkle to the water feature at night."

The selection of plants for Japanese gardens includes Acers, bamboo, evergreen shrubs and lovely 'cloud trees' that feature clipped foliage pads from Japan.

Rhino Rock landscaping services offers a fresh approach to Japanese garden design, water gardens and contemporary spaces.

LITTLE GEMS:
Meticulous detail goes into planning a Japanese garden

He said: "We charge a design fee and also provide a firm quote for the work to be done."

His small professional team works on your project from conception to construction.

"We go to great lengths to meet the client's requirements, working to ensure that they are pleased upon project completion. We build only one garden at a time and, barring inclement weather, work through from start to finish without interruption," said Mr Healey.

His customer base includes the public, self-build developers, interior designers, architects, landscape architects and the building trade.

He said: "We have been importing granite products for many years and use many of them in our Japanese landscaping projects. Our manufacturing partners have been carefully selected to ensure that the granite used and the quality of the goods produced is always of the highest standard."

WALLPAPER in the home is enjoying a surge in popularity as people look to brighten up their décor.

Minimalism was popular for a number of years when it came to interiors, but homeowners are once again embracing colour and vibrancy.

Astra Décor Ltd, of Milton Regis, near Sittingbourne, is Kent's largest specialist wallpaper store and has been established for 40 years.

It has more than 750 designs in stock and there are another 20,000 options available to view in books.

George Miller, who runs the company, said: "What used to be the case is that wallpaper became popular as most homes did not have great walls. As these improved, minimalist designs became popular – but there was also the concept of a 'feature wall'. This is one out of four which is decorated in bright colours and provides a focus for the room.

"Then people started to think 'Maybe the whole room can be vibrant and bright'. So they started to decorate the four walls."

To give customers as wide a range as possible, Astra Décor has stocks from all the main UK and European manufacturers.

Mr Miller said: "We have people coming to us from as far away as Holland, Belgium and France. It's interesting that people use the wallpaper to express part of their personalities – reflecting themselves in their homes.

"Extroverts may choose something which will immediately hit you when you walk into a room, and introverts may prefer something a little more discreet.

"But whatever they want, we will be there to offer advice. I feel that we get so many visitors to our store as wallpaper is a tactile thing.

ATTRACTING wild birds to a garden is one way of increasing appreciation of the natural world – and there are ways to make your surroundings attractive to different species.

Last year's RSPB Big Garden Birdwatch results showed some of the smaller birds that had decreased in numbers the previous year bounced back. But in the last 30 years many species have been in decline.

Sightings of house sparrows, robins, chaffinches and starlings have all declined since 1979, while woodpigeons and collared doves have shown big increases. The problem is that the sheer size of the bigger birds can scare off small birds that venture into gardens.

However, there are specific foods that smaller birds love and you might consider when refilling your bird-feeders; these include such as nyjer and sunflower seeds. Peanuts are rich in fat, but you should never use salted or dry-roasted peanuts, and only buy from a reputable source.

Fat-balls are great for many birds, especially in cold weather, but make sure you remove them from any nylon mesh before putting them out as birds can catch their feet in the mesh.

Live food such as mealworms is relished, but make sure these are fresh.

Of course, your own planting scheme can also go some way to making your garden a haven for birds. A good hedgerow, with a mixture of deciduous trees, shrubs and climbers, will provide birds with both shelter and food.

If you select your bird food carefully, hopefully you'll soon have a host of winged visitors – and not only the large ones – to your garden.

Preparation to make your garden grow

Kent-born and bred, Lucy Hewett grew up on the family farm in Staplehurst. She was always interested in plants and after the birth of her daughter she studied and became RHS-qualified. She now spends her time growing vegetables and flowers from her smallholding in Lynsted near Faversham. Much of her quality produce finds its way to local pubs and restaurants.

LUCY'S PATCH

by LUCY HEWETT

FOR someone who loves the garden, winter gardening can be a physiological battle. To leave the warmth of the house and get out there can be the hardest thing. However, some of my most productive times have been in the winter.

So I vowed I would not procrastinate this year but instead grasp the nettle (no pun intended) and get ahead with some jobs before the onset of spring. Although the winter is (hopefully) nearing its end, there is still time to prepare.

Bright and breezy

It's not all gloom and doom out there. It's worth venturing out just to see the variety of winter interest around: the fragrant blooms of viburnums, Sarcococca confusa (Christmas box), Lonicera fragrantissima (shrubby honeysuckle), Hamamelis (Chinese witch hazel), Skimmias and the berries of the holly.

The beautiful coloured stems of dogwoods, willows and the polished mahogany bark of the

Assess, reshape and reposition

When the ground is bare in the winter months it's a good time to assess your whole garden. If the ground is not too hard you can reshape beds and reposition dominant features to improve planting schemes.

Structure in the form of trees, shrubs, hedges, walls and fences is so important if you don't want your garden to look lifeless out of season and provide a good background for summer interest.

Evergreens clipped into distinctive shapes give some formality. Use this time to check fences for damage and repair while you are able to get to them to do so.

Tidy and clean

So now's a chance to tackle that pile of seed trays and pots you've been collecting all year.

Give them a brush and wash with a little Jeyes fluid or disinfectant – clean pots means healthy plants. Cloches will also benefit from a wash with soapy water; then pop the cloches over the soil to start warming it in preparation for seed-sowing.

Sweep out the greenhouse and wash down the glass that may have become grubby and renew bubblewrap and capillary matting if necessary.

Clear leaves from paths to avoid slipping on them and from beds and pop them on the compost. Now, doesn't that feel better! Nothing like a bit of order to get you ready for the spring.

Pruning

You can go for years without really needing to do any serious pruning, but roses are one of the things that do need to be pruned yearly.

• Rose-pruning: make sure your secateurs are sharp. Always cut at an angle just above a bud/leaf joint that faces the direction you want the new shoot to grow in, which is generally outwards to avoid crowding the centre of the plant.

Cut out any crossing, dead, damaged or diseased stems. Add some potash around the base also.

• Trees and shrub-pruning: the same applies to any trees or shrubs that need a tidy-up – use long-handled loppers to give you greater leverage on thicker stems and pruning saws for branches. Always cut a branch close but not flush to the trunk or main stem.

Cut back any clematis you have that flowered in late spring or early summer and tie in wayward stems to the main support. Early spring flowering and winter clematis do not need any attention now.

If you are not sure which shrubs can be pruned now, the rule of thumb is: if it flowers before mid-summer (mid-June), prune it immediately after flowering and, if it flowers later, prune it in late winter or early spring. You can apply that rule to almost any plant with woody stems.

And next time...

Like the idea of always having a meal available in your garden whenever you want it? Then have a go at growing your own – if you've never tried or if you are already a budding allotment grower next month we will be looking at things to consider when planning a veg patch.

Medway FAIR TRADER SCHEME

Medway Fair Trader Scheme

What exactly is it?

The Medway Fair Trader Scheme is a Medway Trading Standards Service initiative. The aim of the scheme is to improve business standards and increase customer confidence in member businesses. Approved businesses have agreed to abide by the terms and conditions of the scheme and have been checked by Trading Standards to ensure compliance. Each year Medway Council's Trading Standards Service receives in the region of five thousand complaints about businesses in the Medway area. A significant number of these are associated with home improvements. This scheme is a positive move to improve the way in which traders deal with consumers. There is no place in it for rogue traders who do not care for customer satisfaction or compliance with the law. Businesses are demonstrating a commitment to customer care and fair-trading. Trading Standards will continue to work closely with scheme members, and will carry out monitoring exercises to help make sure high standards are maintained. For more information about participating in the Medway Council's fair trader scheme, visit the Website: www.medway.gov.uk/fairtrader

*NB Approval of a business does not mean that the Trading Standards Service can guarantee its financial stability or has individually checked the quality of any goods or services provided. Trading standards cannot give any guarantee or warranty as to the value for money of goods or services compared with a competitor, or that they will be satisfactory"

Adapt just one wall to add all the extra space you could ever need...

WITH the property market being the way it is, many people are looking to make more out of their current home.

Elephant Windows, with 40 years' experience, is perfectly placed to help people get the most out of their house.

The company is part of the prestigious Piper Group, a major contractor and manufacturer of high-quality home improvements for many local authorities.

Many Elephant customers have realised they don't have to go to specialist design companies and pay extortionate prices for their orangery.

"Here at Elephant we can design, manufacture and build bespoke conservatories and orangeries that exactly meet our customers' demands," said a spokesman for Elephant's in-house CAD design team.

Elephant has been offering a full service to their customers throughout Kent for their conservatories for 40 years, a service that is now offered to all orangery customers, from initial consultation, survey, CAD drawings, planning and manufacture to installation, all free of charge.

The business can even deal with obtaining planning permission through the Elephant Windows planning consultant, giving a holistic service from start to finish, with satisfaction guaranteed, so making it easy to get that extra room customers have always wanted.

The contemporary orangeries from Elephant are entirely bespoke and an ideal way to introduce more space without having to sacrifice any of the garden.

Choosing a wall of Elephant's bi-folding aluminium doors means the space has a dual function: close them and customers gain an indoor dining room, playroom or kitchen; leave them open and the garden becomes an extension of the home's living space.

They are also ideal for entertaining, especially in the summer, when doors can be left open, making for a seamless transition between home and garden, enabling a party or other social event to spill out of the house into the sunshine, maximising space while at the same time providing elegance to an existing home.

Conservatories are another great way to give the home that all-important light and airy feeling.

A place to relax with large windows, they allow a view out to the garden, increasing the feeling of space in the home and making a connection between the interior and exterior space.

With the addition of plants and carefully-arranged furniture, they can add markedly to the style and individuality of any home as well as considerably increasing its value.

Addition of a drinks cabinet is always welcome, especially when the room is used for entertaining guests, and a dining table can be used to give something of an alfresco feel to meals taken in the room rather than in a more formal home setting.

■ All Elephant staff are experts at understanding and delivering what you want to make your house the home of your dreams. For more information or a free quotation about the design excellence, you can phone Elephant on 0800 195 0000 or visit www.elephantwindows.co.uk.

Stamp-duty holiday pushes sales up

HOUSE sales in the South East edged up slightly during January as an increased number of first-time buyers looked to beat the stamp-duty holiday, which expires in March, says the latest RICS UK Housing Market survey.

A total of 14 per cent more surveyors across the region reported rises rather than falls in newly-agreed sales since the beginning of the year. From Saturday, March 24, first-time buyers will no longer be exempt from stamp duty on properties under £250,000 and some surveyors note this has produced an increase in activity at the lower end of the market.

In light of this, respondents in the region were optimistic about prospects in the near term, as a net balance of 27 per cent of surveyors predicted transaction levels to pick up over the coming three months. This represents the strongest reading since June 2011.

In spite of this relative optimism, prices across the region continued to drop, albeit moderately, with 16 per cent more surveyors reporting price falls rather than rises.

Looking ahead, while a cautious optimism surrounds future transaction levels, the same cannot be said for future prices. A net balance of 5 per cent more surveyors expect prices to continue falling over the coming three months.

Special offer to help you to get on the property ladder

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

MOAT, the Government-appointed Local Home-Buy Agent for Kent, is running an exclusive short-term promotion on a range of shared-ownership homes across the county.

Shared ownership is a way to get started in the housing market. Also known as part buy/part rent, this Government-funded initiative helps first-time buyers purchase a share in a new home, with a subsidised low rent payable on the remaining share.

At a later stage, a shared owner can purchase further shares in their home until they own it outright; this is known as staircasing and allows first-time buyers to work their way up to 100 per cent ownership in their own time, when they can afford it.

Moat is also giving first-time buyers the opportunity to win £300 in Bluewater shopping vouchers if they purchase one of these homes by Friday, March 23.

Many shared-ownership homes come with a range of white goods, which cuts down on added expenses. Better still, first-time buyers can take advantage of the Government's Stamp Duty holiday if they buy a home before Saturday, March 24.

There are some wonderful properties featuring in this promotion, the company says. At St Mary's Island, Chatham Maritime, Moat is offering a three-bedroom house from just £64,500 for a 30 per cent share, and a two-bedroom, first-floor apartment for £54,000 for a 30 per cent share. In Minster, first-time buyers can buy 25 per cent of a three-bedroom house at Spencers Park for just £41,250.

For apartments with excellent international rail links to London and Europe, the new Stanhope in Ashford offers 25 per cent of a one-bedroom apartment for £18,750. Alternatively, Waterstone Park in Greenhithe has a final one-bedroom, second-floor apartment available for £45,000 for a 30 per cent share.

Shared-ownership homes require smaller deposits. Purchasers need just a deposit on the share they wish to buy, not the total value of the property.

More information on this promotion, as well as property details and eligibility criteria, can be found at www.moat.co.uk/loveyourhome.

Alternatively, Paula Turner at Moat will answer questions by email on turner.paula@moat.co.uk, or you can phone 0845 3596387.

CHAPEL PLACE LIMITED

Land Agents

Chapel Place Limited are a specialist land consultancy with many years' experience in the sale and acquisition of land and development opportunities in the South East. With the aid of our architects and planning advisors we have assisted many clients in obtaining planning permissions even in the most complex situations. Through our network of associated offices, we have one of the largest databases of developers and self builders looking for a variety of sites over several counties. We would be pleased to ascertain the potential of your land and advise you of the most appropriate method of sale and look forward to hearing from you if we can be of assistance! Our specialist site finding services has proved to be particularly popular and successful and we are pleased to share with you our latest success story with pictures of before and after. Our clients, Mike and Janey, commented after the site finding exercise "Chapel Place played an essential role in the acquisition of our wonderful plot of land in the Sussex Downs by personally visiting locations on our behalf due to our geographic circumstances. We really appreciated the services of Andrea and Steve with their expertise, local knowledge and with their 'finger on the pulse' in all of our areas of choice. They were punctual in reporting back with photos and recommendations from local estate agents on availability and values and we would highly recommend their services over any of the conventional land and estate agents".

‘Sorcerer’ returns in the guise of magical new Renault Clio

carsforkent.co.uk

By Sam Davison

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

“WHO are those guys?” is the question posed in that classic Western, Butch Cassidy And The Sundance Kid, as the two heroes look back at their relentless and ever-more threatening pursuers.

It’s a question European carmakers may ask, too, as they check out the threat from Hyundai’s second-generation i30 five-door family hatchback arriving in March.

Not only is it with us just five years after the original – European marques generally follow a seven-year model replacement cycle – but the i30 looks like a quantum leap ahead of its by no means mundane predecessor.

The styling is far crisper and, in line with the i40 family model that wowed us last year, the cabin is far superior in style, design and quality to what has gone before – Hyundai is on a roll here and that is starting to show in stronger second-hand values.

I’m willing to bet the driving experience won’t be quite on a par with the excellent Ford Focus, VW Golf and Vauxhall Astra, but the Hyundai will be backed by the Korean marque’s famous five-year/unlimited-mileage warranty, which is a powerful persuader in gloomy economic times and good for resale as well as a sign of confidence in your own products.

For those who have no intention of pushing their precious family motor to silly limits, then, the good-looking Hyundai could seem a better proposition than the European trio.

Shrewd buyers may also be tempted by the fact that all of the 1.6CRDi diesel manual versions come with Hyundai’s Blue Drive eco technologies as standard, offering road tax-exempt CO2 emissions of 97g/km on the lowest output 110PS (109bhp) version and pound-stretching economy without compromising on low-down power output.

The new generation i30 will be available in four main trim levels – Classic, Active, Style and Style Nav – with an entry-level 1.4-litre petrol option from £14,495 as well as the diesel (from £16,895) mentioned earlier.

New standard features on the i30 include voice-activated Bluetooth connectivity, LED daytime running lights, multi-function steering wheel for audio and other controls and electrically-adjustable and heated door mirrors. Mid-range Active trim (from £15,595) includes alloys, cruise control, rear parking sensors and Hyundai’s new dynamic Flex Steer system.

Trading up to Style models (from £16,595), though, brings the sort of luxuries that would cost far more with other marques, such as 16-inch alloys, dual-zone climate control, front parking sensors, rain-sensing wipers, cornering lights, automatic headlights, automatic de-fog system for front windscreen and electrically-folding door mirrors with LED indicators.

Topping the range is Style Nav, which brings a touch-screen satellite navigation system and rear-view parking camera.

Hyundai maintains relentless pursuit of Europe’s first string

ON THE TRAIL: This new-look i30 follows the standards set by Hyundai’s i40 model combining style, design and quality to surpass what has gone before

DON'T LIKE

...the fact Hyundai remains a highly underrated brand in the UK. Is it badge snobbery or a simple lack of awareness?

NOT SURE

...the Korean marque will yet be a match on handling against established rivals like the Ford Focus, VW Golf and Vauxhall Astra.

REALLY LIKE

...how Hyundai has mastered the art of matching exterior and interior style and quality in this latest generation of models, started by the i40.

X1 marks the crossover spot as BMW drives for perfection

By Sam Davison

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

WHO would have thought, just a few years ago, that BMW would make such a success out of producing 4x4s and SUVs?

After all, we are talking about the legendary producer of sharp handling conventional cars – the premium purveyor of the 'Ultimate Driving Machine', to quote the marque's famous marketing slogan.

What could such people want with clumsy, lumpy almost oafish 4x4s?

Except that BMW has, more than any other marque, turned the 4x4 image on its head, first with the big yet nimble X5 and then with a whole family of high-riding 4x4s that recognise how top quality road manners come first with off-road ability thrown in afterwards.

Of course, the off-road power has sometimes come a distant second – as in the case of the first generation X3 – while the X6 4x4 coupé is something of a contradiction in terms.

However, the X-Series has gone from being a novelty turn to one of BMW's main players.

Which brings us to the youngest and smallest member and also the odd one out in the German marque's four-model X line-up

That's because it's available with rear-wheel drive only if required, adding to the overall X1 proposition as a premium cheap-to-run off-roader style car.

This appeal also takes it into crossover territory, the glamorous new niche exposed by the Nissan Qashqai and now fast becoming a best-selling sector in the UK.

What crossovers have done is shown that chunky high-riding cars are perfectly acceptable in all walks of life and, in doing so, have made inroads into family hatchback and MPV sales.

And the X1 has all of that crowd-pleasing versatility, too, with a high driving position, butch styling and a versatile five-door body.

Being the most compact X-series car it's also

ODD ONE OUT: BMW's

X1 is the only one of its 4x4 range with rear-wheel-drive only if required, taking it into crossover territory, fast becoming the best-selling sector in the country more affordable (from £24,420) and more at home in the tighter confines of the town and city.

BMW has adopted a down-to-earth approach to marketing the car, too, with just one powertrain, a 2.0-litre turbodiesel with six-speed manual 'box as standard, but it's available with four different outputs.

Our xDrive 18d MSport test car loaned by Broad Oak BMW of Ashford and Canterbury had the most junior 143bhp package, but that still delivers 0-62mph in a shade over 10 seconds, even with the 4x4 set-up denoted by its xDrive label – rear-wheel drive only models carry the sDrive tag. The six-speed manual gearbox and BMW's standard EfficientDynamics economy package also enables the car to average around 50mpg – not bad for a sporting all-wheel drive crossover vehicle.

And, of course, being a BMW means it toes the line literally on driving and handling, aided and abetted by well-ordered ratios on the gearbox. It is quite astonishing in fact to feel how flat the car remains on corners rather than healing over in the more typical 4x4/SUV fashion.

Though you sit higher, you really do feel that you could be in the marque's best-selling 3-Series, although not so surprising since the X1 is based upon the same platform.

As you might expect, such grip and serenity comes as the price of a slightly harder ride, though it's not awful and the X1 cruises with refinement on the motorway.

It is the smallest of the X-Series so you wouldn't expect great roominess, but the only black mark is against the middle rear seat where legroom either side of the transmission hump is a bit tight.

Headroom in the back is excellent though and boot and cargo capacity is similarly impressive, especially once the split/folding rear seats are flat to the floor.

As expected from BMW, the dashboard is has a logical and driver-pleasing style, even though the quality of the materials is not quite up to the usual standard.

MOTORING NEWS

Fresh Ceed at Geneva show

KIA aims to wow the prestigious Geneva Motor Show (March 8-18) by using it again for the public debut of the new Ceed family hatchback.

This time it's the second generation of the model that has done most to transform the Korean marque into a respected player with UK car buyers.

Order book is open for CX-5

MAZDA has announced prices for its all-new technologically-advanced and sporty CX-5 crossover/SUV, arriving this spring.

It will cost from £21,395 and be offered with a choice of petrol or diesel engines and two-wheel or all-wheel drive (from £24,695) with the most fuel efficient versions capable of averaging more than 60mpg, and CO2 emissions as low as 119g/km – supermini territory.

Ford scores with its doors

FORD will blow the doors off the mini-MPV sector with its all-new B-Max arriving in late summer.

The car does away with a central door pillar and features sliding rear doors, together allowing an unrivalled 1.5-metre wide access for passengers and luggage – a potential boon to young mums.

The rival Vauxhall Meriva offers 0.7 metres through its rear doors.

New Registration

COUPE-STYLE WITH PRACTICALITY: A third door on the pavement side makes the new Hyundai Veloster unique in the market, while the stylish all-new 2012 Honda Civic, below, is made in the UK

Make big savings with a new '12 plate

By Sam Davison

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

IF the new car market is any barometer, then the UK economy is already starting to turn around.

Demand for new cars in 2011 managed to defy the worst industry predictions; though the 1.94 million registrations was still down 4.4 per cent on 2010, it was far better than the gloomy 1.92 million forecast.

The supplier of those figures and motor industry mouthpiece, the SMMT (Society of Motors Manufacturers and Traders), still expects a tough 2012, but chief executive Paul Everitt said: "Record numbers of new and updated models, significantly improved fuel efficiency and exciting new technologies will help to encourage consumers into showrooms."

And that's the point: with so many technical and money-saving developments, people are buying because running a newer car can save money, while leaving it in a savings account makes hardly anything.

Fuel-sipping diesel and alternatively fuelled cars both took record market shares in 2011 as average new car CO₂ emissions fell to a new low of 138.1g/km, down 4.2 per cent on the 2010 level, while low emission cars qualify for road tax exemption or very low rates.

You can also make savings on a new '12 registration plate car from March 1 by driving a hard bargain with manufacturers and forecourts that are keen to deal and prepared to discount against the list prices.

Get a realistic valuation on your old car too, since used car values are buoyant due to the lower number of new cars sold since the recession hit in 2007, meaning fewer used cars in circulation to soak up demand from that sector.

Other buyer incentives out there include tempting finance packages or personal leases – which banks aren't keen to match – insurance and servicing.

There are also outstanding warranties available such as Kia's seven-year/100,000-mile package, Vauxhall's Lifetime package and Hyundai's five-year/unlimited mileage deal. And servicing deals can be very cost-effective, so ask about those.

Diesels may have won over many skeptics with their economy and good low-down power delivery, but petrol is making a strong case too now: petrol fuel should remain more affordable than diesel simply because of the way UK oil refining capacity is geared.

Petrol engines are also cheaper and lighter, and while they still cannot compete on absolute economy against diesels, you need to be a high mileage user to recoup the higher up-front cost of the latter. A lighter engine saves wear on the front tyres and mechanicals too.

Small and efficient turbocharged petrol units also make a difference in small cars – they are nimbler and nicer to drive – and road tax and emissions for petrol engines are both getting better.

Thinking small makes sense when buying new SMALL-MINDEDNESS is really sensible when buying a car nowadays.

Two decades ago the family saloon Ford Mondeo type car dominated, thanks to the company car culture.

Then came the rise of the family hatchback and supermini; throughout the 90s and early Noughties they had a ding-dong battle for market leadership.

However, soaring fuel and insurance costs, greater environmental awareness, punitive road tax on larger cars, and ever more stylish small car designs, have enabled superminis to take some 40 per cent of sales if you include the even smaller city car segment. Even family hatchbacks had to settle for the number two spot with around 25 per cent of registrations.

More difficult to quantify though is the trend towards 'crossovers' – cars like the Kia Sportage, Hyundai ix-35 and Citroën C3 Picasso.

As the name implies they straddle several sectors including family hatchback, MPV (multi-purpose vehicle) or people carrier and SUV (sports utility vehicle) and are hard to pigeon-hole under current classifications.

But these 'Swiss Army Knives' of the market are here to stay judging by the numbers being sold.

DON'T accept the first deal on offer – be ready to haggle.

DON'T be afraid to ask for trimmings like a tank of fuel, car mats or further discounts or extras.

DON'T fall for what seems like a big bargain before you even haggle. It could be an unpopular engine or trim combination or a car on 'run-out' where production ceased a while ago – it might be just as thirsty as your old car and will depreciate badly.

DO pick a model that saves fuel, insurance, road tax and depreciation – it won't get any easier out there.

DON'T be blinded by road tax-exempt, but expensive diesel eco models – check price, running costs, green credentials and the savings over your planned ownership mileage/years, then compare against the closest standard version.

DON'T assume that diesel will save – you usually pay more upfront and the engines are generally heavier, which means more wear on front tyres and mechanicals. The fuel is also dearer at the pumps, while petrol car economy and emissions have improved and they are often nicer to drive.

CROSSOVER STYLE: Toyota's sporty RAV4 is a star of the SUV sector while one of the best-looking supermini estates has to be Seat's stylish Ibiza ST

BIG VIEW:
Cab view of the Mercedes-Benz Vito – designed for driver comfort as well as efficiency and long-term reliability for the operator

Extra appeal of new vans

DESIGNING a van still requires a box for cargo, but everything else has been revolutionised in a decade.

Operators have seen economy, efficiency and flexibility soar, while drivers now get better performance, refinement and safety.

Initially, this benefited car-derived models and included air con and a decent sound system, but the philosophy has since migrated to larger vans.

The range of van capacities has also widened, varying from as little as three cubic metres for a car-derived hatchback used for courier work or company runabouts, right up to a 17-cubic-metre delivery van.

Access has improved too. Many larger vans have low floors in the driving compartment for easy access and most vehicles above the supermini class now come with at least one sliding door as standard to aid loading – many buyers take the option of a second 'slider'.

There is now a choice usually of side-opening twin rear doors or a high lift tailgate as well, while cab doors generally have a reduced opening angle, with the double benefit of making it easy for a busy driver to grab the handle to close the door and also avoid it swinging wide and hitting something.

And petrol driven vans have been displaced by the better economy, range and low down pulling power of diesels.

Extended service periods, lower maintenance costs and longer lasting parts then compound diesel operating benefits.

Gearboxes have also changed. A six-speed manual gearbox is the standard – two cogs better than only a few years ago – but urban operators are turning increasingly to automatic, semi-automatic or clutch-less transmissions. These can usually be driven with manual selection anyway, but are ideal for the stop-start urban traffic conditions and can be as economical as a manual.

HERE IS THE HUES: Red has fallen in popularity but suits a sporty shape such as the new Kia Rio supermini, which can carry it off, whereas blue was No 3 in an industry colour poll and suits Toyota's Yaris RESTRAIN yourself when choosing the colour or added bling for your new '12 reg motor – that's the advice of the experts.

For you may want sell on at some stage and, like those hideous 70s bathroom suites, find that 'acid green' and 'latte brown' is not to everyone's taste, though wild colours can suit certain cars: Seat has used red, blue, yellow and white to great effect on its sporty little numbers, while Honda has also been adventurous with red and yellow on its Civic and Jazz models.

Go easy on the colour

And playing safe can be a turn-off to would-be buyers too, so here a colour league table from the SMMT – the motor trade body – plus some pros and cons:

1) Black (24.7 per cent) is the perennial favourite but looks dirty quickly and shows little scratches or the swirling effect from over-use of mechanical car washes.

2) Silver (21.4) is still riding high and hides scratches and carwash abrasion well, but is increasingly seen as the boring or safe option.

3) Blue (16.5) is conservative yet smart, but very dark blue is best avoided.

4) Grey Metallic (14.4) – more assertive and up-market than silver?

5) Red (10.2) had fallen away due to a tendency to go pinker with age, but better finishes and use on sportier models has helped stabilise figures.

6) White (10) has shot back up the charts: it's usually a no-cost option, handles wear and tear well and also reflects the heat.

Also-rans: Green (1.1), Beige (0.9), Yellow (0.4) and Brown (0.4)

More motorists are buying into 'green' savings

By Sam Davison

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

CARE for the environment can be a good enough reason for buying a greener car.

But many buyers now realize that care for the wallet is another, with many new models not only helping to offset ever-rising fuel bills, but also lowering or even removing road tax bills altogether.

The latest tax bandings range from zero for those cars with the lowest CO₂ emissions right up to £950 a year for gas guzzling limos or 4x4s.

Of course, anyone spending £50,000-£100,000 on a new motor won't worry about small change like that, but most people like saving a few quid on their fuel and tax while, incidentally, doing their bit for the environment.

Longer term, electric cars may be the answer and there has been much publicity about 'plug-in' models for overnight charging at home or city centre charging points.

But battery technology has some catching up to do and the zero emissions argument is misleading. Until we have zero emission power stations, electric cars simply transfer the CO₂ and noxious gas output from exhaust pipe to belching chimney.

Production of hydrogen to power our cars raises a similar dilemma.

So, are hybrids the answer, then?

Japanese giants Toyota and Honda lead here, pairing conventional engines with electric power and batteries.

But hybrids tend to be dearer upfront so the internal combustion 'lump' still has a part to play

now that its emissions are plummeting, economy soaring, and refinement improving.

In fact, things are moving so fast that you marvel at what some legislative prods have achieved.

The downsizing phenomenon is well under way, too, with several new cars proving that 'small is beautiful'. Most carmakers also now have an 'eco' sub brand such as Vauxhall's Ecoflex, Hyundai's Blue Drive models and Kia's Ecodynamics range.

But they often don't come cheap either, so weigh potential long-term savings against upfront cost: if you don't cover the miles, conventional alternatives may be a better bet.

Don't ignore petrol models either; the higher price of diesel cars and the fuel at the pumps must be compared with new small capacity low emission/consumption petrol engines.

SPECIAL REPORT

The mysterious case of why the county struggles to produce England stars

By Fred Atkins

sports@kosmedia.co.uk

FOR the first time ever this summer, Kent could punch above its weight at football's European Championships, with two of the 23-man squad likely to be from the county.

On current form, Liverpool's Glen Johnson, and Manchester United's Chris Smalling are both expected to be selected by whichever manager the FA next decides to throw £6 million a year at.

While both were born in Greenwich, they were predominantly raised in Kent, with Johnson going to the Leigh Academy in Dartford and Smalling attending Chatham Grammar School.

The population of England is approximately 51 million, of whom around 1.6 million, a little over three percent, live in Kent yet historically the county hasn't produced top-flight footballers in anything like the numbers needed to make a regular contribution to the England team.

The last great hope, the Maidstone-born Jon Harley, made 42 appearances for Chelsea, without ever making the anticipated breakthrough at the highest level. He's had a respectable career and a scattering of others are in the professional ranks, like Snodland's Paul Jones at Peterborough, or Maidstone's Doug Loft at Port Vale. But Kent undoubtedly underachieves.

Glenn Aitken, a former Wimbledon player who went on to become chief executive at Gravesend & Northfleet, and now coaches Kent's under-15s, believes too many players are put off by their experiences with big clubs.

"I've thought long and hard about this and had the debate with various people," he said. "The system breaks down between the schools and the professional clubs. The professional clubs are keen to get their hands on the talented players as early as possible, but they're equally keen to get rid of them six weeks or two years later. There's not a smooth transition and I see a

Not everyone copes with the rejection.

"At the games I manage there are scouts from Chelsea, Aston Villa and Fulham," Aitken said. "(But) playing for Kent has lost some of the esteem it used to have. People used to aspire to play for Kent but now they're sold on the idea of joining a professional club as soon as possible. Once they're ditched they tend not to come back.

"We are producing players of quality like Chris Smalling which proves it's not essential to go with the pro clubs but it is important to get good quality coaching."

Smalling's climb from Maidstone United, via Fulham, to champions United in the space of just a handful of years, has been often cited how top talent can be spotted, nurtured and capitalised on.

Yet Aitken believes clubs are looking at players with technical ability at an early age to the exclusion of those who could still develop.

"A lot of players have the will to win but at 13 or 14 or even eight or nine they may not have the skills," he said. "Professional clubs go for the players who have the skills but may not have the

That could be attributed to Kent being a predominantly middle class county. England internationals come from overwhelmingly working class backgrounds and while it's something of a cliché to say that players from wealthy backgrounds lack incentives, the question of hunger is valid according to Chatham Town's Keith Levett, who is heavily involved in player development around the county and also runs Welling United's academy.

"There's no one reason why Kent doesn't produce so many top players," he said. "There are lots of factors but one is that Kent is quite an affluent county. I'm not saying there aren't deprived areas because there are, but players (in Kent) tend to come from well-off backgrounds.

It's also possible that we don't really have a marquee club to attract the talent. We've got Gillingham and Maidstone's a massive town that might start producing players when the new stadium gets built, but players often get mopped up by London clubs."

If Kent produced a number of internationals proportionate to its population it would contribute one player to the England squad for three out of every four major tournaments, but Johnson's selection for South Africa 2010 was the first time a player with anything other than a tenuous connection to the county had even come close to a call-up since Yalding's David Sadler was left out of Alf Ramsey's final squad for Mexico in 1970.

Paradoxically every Republic of Ireland squad for a major tournament has included at least one Kent-born player.

St Paul's Cray's Tony Cascarino, Maidstone-born Andy Townsend and former Maidstone and Gillingham defender Gary Breen all won international call-ups.

HORSE RACING

York double pulls in crowds at Point-to-Point

IT may not come with quite the glitz and glamour associated with the 'sport of kings' but the ever popular Charing Point-to-Point meeting last weekend still pulls in the crowds.

The popular meeting took place last Sunday with punters enjoying a packed card.

York brought the event to a close by taking the fifth race on the 4-1 shot Ringa Bay, then the sixth on the 6-1

Encatadora, beating a trio of fancied horses by six clear lengths.

The meeting began with Will Hickman riding the evens favourite Mr Maybe to victory, ahead of the 2-1 Chosen Few, in the first race, the Gill Jarvis Memorial.

James Tudor then took the 7-4 joint-favourite Harbour Court to first place in the Members Restricted Race, but riding Bon Accord he was beaten into third by the 14-1 shot Master T in the next race, the Shepherd Neame Open, which Master T, ridden by Peter Bull, won by three lengths from Man from Moscow.

Claire Douglas took the Jeffrey and Penny Peate Ladies Open on the 5-2 Tom's Toybox, ahead of Frankie Hickman on Knock on the Head and Gemma Cobb's Master Alf, who pipped the favourite Horner Woods for third spot.

The next South East Area point-to-point event in Kent is at Penshurst on March 17.

GILLINGHAM - MATCH PREVIEW

'Enjoy yourselves' Hess tells stars as Gulls fly in

By Fred Atkins

sports@kosmedia.co.uk

IT might not be that easy to "enjoy yourself" when you're on a winless streak that stretches back for seven matches, but that was the message from Gillingham boss Andy Hessenthaler to his squad ahead of Saturday's League Two game with Torquay United.

Hessenthaler will keep faith with his young players for the showdown at Priestfield, a game the Gills really need to win if they're to harbour any serious ambitions of whittling down the eight-point gap that separates them from the play-off places.

The manager conceded the Gills had been on a poor run but he felt vindicated by the way his younger players performed in the 2-1 defeat at Port Vale last Saturday and at the 0-0 draw at home to Rotherham on Tuesday night, even if they only yielded one point from a possible six.

"We've been trying to find the right formula, and I'm really pleased with the way we've set out our stall in the last two games," he said. "We played very well for 80 minutes at Port Vale and I think that was a really good clean sheet on Tuesday night.

"I watched them (Rotherham) on the Friday before we played Southend and they beat them 2-0, so it was a tremendous effort by the players and I think the fans appreciated it.

"That's what we've got to do week in, week out, maximum effort but try to look like you're enjoying yourselves."

FADING DREAMS: Gills must hunt all three points to keep alive hopes of securing a play-off place

Torquay, by contrast, had been in excellent form, having won seven straight games before they lost to Brentford at home on Saturday, but they crashed to a 5-2 defeat when they hosted Gillingham at Plainmoor back in October and Hessenthaler is confident Gillingham can complete a double.

"Most managers will look at us and say they're

CHATHAM TOWN

Chats seek a swift end to run of painful big defeats

SUCCESSIVE 3-0 defeats haven't done a lot for Chatham Town's position in Ryman 1 North, but assistant manager Keith Levett says they'll go into this Saturday's trip to Heybridge Swifts with morale high, after a positive display at Enfield Town on Tuesday night.

"I know it sounds odd, but we'll go there with a lot of confidence on the back of a decent performance," he said.

"We've just got to take that into the game, there's no point in being too down."

After an abject display at home to AFC Sudbury at Maidstone Road on Saturday, the Chats looked far better at Enfield, but trailed to a Brad Potter own goal at half-time.

Two late goals gave the scoreline a flattering look for the home side and Enfield also missed a controversially-awarded penalty, but Levett felt his side had been competitive.

"We're pleased, it was positive," he said. "Against Sudbury we didn't deserve anything, but on Tuesday night (at Enfield) we played well.

"We were 1-0 down at half-time but we dominated possession.

LEVETT: Confidence rising again

"At half-time we were pleased because it was actually one of better performances of the season, but in the second half we couldn't get through so we made some changes.

"They scored on 70 minutes so at 2-0 down we took off a defender and got caught again, but it wasn't all bad."

Heybridge sit just two places above the Chats in 12th place, but with a four point gap.

INVICTA DYNAMOS

Pitbull mauling "disgraceful" blasts Dynamos' boss Parrish

KEVIN Parrish says the Invicta Dynamos have no margin for error ahead of this weekend's double-header, after a performance he described as "disgraceful" against Bristol last Saturday.

The Mos crashed 6-3 at home to Bristol Pitbulls before going to down 5-2 to league leaders Romford Raiders just 24 hours later.

"I'm still getting over it now," Parrish said.

"Bristol should have been a win, it's as simple as that and the attitude in the changing room was 'we're going to win'. We scored after 35 seconds and thought it was going to be a walkover, but it was awful, disgraceful.

"If anyone can look himself in the mirror and say 'I did all right there' he'd be lying and I include myself in that," Parrish said.

The Mos improved against a quality Romford side, but having held them 2-2 until the final period Parrish admitted their heads went down after they conceded a brilliant individual goal.

"We won't be pushing any panic buttons but after the weekend we've had we've got to win every game from now till the end of the season," he said.

The Mos travel to Slough on Saturday, then host Milton Keynes at the Ice Bowl on Sunday.

Face-off is 5.15pm.

WITH FRED ATKINS

Non-league's great leveller

“THE words 'literary classic' and 'Kettering Town' aren't destined to appear in the same sentence too often, but Steve Pitts' '39 Days with Gazza' deserves a better fate than the bargain bucket of a Kent bookstore.

The tale of Paul Gascoigne's doomed foray into management, one of the best books written in the admittedly limited field of non-league football literature, is now on sale for just £1.99.

Pitts was the sports editor of a local paper in 2005 when a tip-off came through that Gascoigne was about to be made manager of Kettering Town.

In Kent a handful of former internationals have flirted with local clubs, but none ever had Gascoigne's stature in the game.

The most recent example was Michael Hughes' abortive takeover at Sittingbourne. The former Northern Ireland international's interest was genuine enough, but when he realised how much money he could blow just getting the Bricksies out of the Ryman League he backed off.

The highest profile managers at Kent clubs in the past decade were Terry Yorath at Margate and Neville Southall at Dover, but neither succeeded, partly because top-flight footballers seldom adapt to the realities of the non-league game.

Kettering's previous chairman, Peter Mallinger, bankrolled the Poppies to the eye-watering tune of £100,000 a year, having rescued them after Mark English, who'd once made an abortive attempt to buy Maidstone United, took them into administration.

This is the kind of money clubs spend just to tread water, but occasionally a businessman who's done well in a different field believes he possesses the genius to buck this trend.

Their first move is often to recruit a high-profile figurehead, as Ashford tried with Rodney Marsh and later Ian Wright.

Mallinger's successor, Imraan Ladak, chooses Gascoigne, but unlike Marsh and Wright, neither of whom could have cared less about Ashford, Gazza actually cares too much.

His body no longer enables him to do the only thing he's ever wanted to, play football. The next best thing is management, but he puts himself under so much pressure it exacerbates his alcoholism.

Gascoigne drinks in the boardroom, he drinks in the dressing room, he falls off the team coach.

After 39 days he's fired and never manages again.

If the story doesn't quite live up to its publishers' billing as being "on a par with The Damned United" it's infinitely better value than Ashley Cole's My Defence, which (for research purposes) I ordered from Amazon for 1p and is magnificently awful.

And I wouldn't even bet 1p against a Kent club employing a "legend" in the next decade and living to regret it.
